Dorion Probe

Pearson May Be Witness

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson may be called before the Dorion Inquiry to explain testimony by RCMP Deputy Commissioner J. R. Lemieux that Mr. Pearson tipped his parliamentary secretary, Guy Rouleau, of RCMP plans to question Rouleau.

Deputy Commissioner Lemieux said RCMP Commissioner G. B. McClellan, scheduled to testify next week, told him this.

OUTSIDE HEARING
Chief Justice Frederic Dorion said the remark about Mr. Pearson is not evidence but reflected a motion that it be stricken from the record of his inquiry into allegations of attempted bribery and coercion by ministerial aides.

Commission counsel Andre Desjardins said outside the hearing he now will have to discuss with Chief Justice Dorion whether to add the prime minister's name to the witness list. One suggestion that Mr. Pearson may be summoned has already been made during the inquiry.

DATES AT ISSUE
Ross Drouin, Conservative party counsel, said previously he may ask to question Mr. Pearson about a Dec. 16 letter from the prime minister saying he knew about the bribery allegation last Sept. 2, not Nov. 24, as he had earlier told the Commons.

Mr. Rouleau was questioned by the RCMP last Sept. 17. Mr. Pearson told the Commons Nov. 24, when Mr. Rouleau resigned as his parliamentary secretary, that Mr. Rouleau did not inform him until that morning about his part in the case.

Mr. Rouleau told the Commons he asked Mr. Pearson to relieve him but had done nothing wrong in making representations in the case of Lucien Rivard.

Prime Minister Not Told—Favreau

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Favreau said Friday night Prime Minister Pearson was not informed beforehand of the RCMP's intention to question his parliamentary secretary, Guy Rouleau, about the Rivard case.

Mr. Favreau, in a statement issued through the prime minister's office, said that Mr. Pearson first spoke to Mr. Rouleau about the matter on Nov. 24—the day he accepted Mr. Rouleau's resignation as parliamentary secretary.

The statement was issued several hours after RCMP Deputy Commissioner J. R. Lemieux told the Dorion Inquiry he was told the prime minister advised Mr. Rouleau last summer that he was to be questioned by the RCMP.

He also said he thought Mr. Pearson had been advised by

'Just Begun to Fight'

Jones Comes Out Swinging At Legislative Dismissal Bill

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Reporter

A bill introduced in the legislature to fire G. E. P. Jones as B.C. purchasing chairman was described by him Friday as instant execution of the innocent.

He called the government's action Thursday incredible and appalling, and said he would not accept the proposed move without a fight.

15 MONTHS' PAY
"In the words of John Paul Jones, I have only just begun to fight," he said.

The bill would give Mr. Jones 15 months' pay dating back to October when he was suspended as chairman of the purchasing commission. He would receive a net $12,057 and qualify for a 10-year civil-service pension.

ACQUITTED JAN. 15

Mr. Jones was acquitted Jan. 15 on two charges of receiving favors from a car dealer while a government official.

He has not been reinstated, and the crown has appealed the verdict of Judge Montague L. Tyrwhitt-Drake.

D. A. Thompson of Vancouver, counsel for Mr. Jones, launched two court actions this week in the case.

APPEAL ATTACK

He will ask the B.C. appeal court Monday to throw out the crown's appeal in the case.

And on Wednesday, provincial comptroller-general C. J. Fether will appear in B.C. Supreme Court to show cause why the government should not be ordered to pay Mr. Jones five months' back salary.

Author Says:

Old Jail Not Fit For Pigs

QUEBEC (CP)—Montreal author Jacques Hebert, 41, out on bail after three days in Quebec's century-old provincial jail, said conditions are so revolting there that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would protest if pigs were lodged in the institution.

The author was freed on $1,000 cash bail pending his appeal on a conviction for contempt of court.

Mr. Hebert was fined $3,000 Tuesday and sent to jail for 30 days as a result of passages in his book, I Accuse the Assassins of Coffin.

Propane Truck Blows Up

Blocks in Ruins

AYLMER, Ont. (CP)—At least a third of this southwestern Ontario town's business section was wiped out Friday when a tanker truck laden with propane gas exploded in a main intersection.

The blaze roared out of control for close to three hours, wiping out about 15 businesses.

Early estimates assessed damage at $1,000,000.

The tanker truck, driven by Elmer Humphries, was having difficulty gaining traction after stopping at the intersection.

A service truck driven by Al Parker gave it a nudge to get it started.

At this point, a valve on the back of the propane truck broke and propane gas gushed out, filling the area with flames, followed by a major explosion and a succession of smaller ones.

Parker was treated for hand burns, but his condition was not serious.

One witness said Humphries, who was not injured, crawled under the tanker to make sure the emergency valves were closed. They were.

U.S. Hints New Attacks

AGGRESSION EVIDENCE 'MASSIVE'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. state department today made public massive new evidence of outside Communist support and direction of the guerrilla war in South Viet Nam. It termed it "aggression as real as that of an invading army."

The 71-page "white paper," which sought to justify the bombings in North Viet Nam, said the Communist infiltration into South Viet Nam has increased to a new high and that Communist guerrillas there are relying more and more on weapons provided by Communist countries.

The report said that the Viet Nam conflict is no longer an "indigenous guerrilla" war, but has become "a totally new brand of aggression."

It said U.S. policy before the recent bombings in the North had been based on the hope "that the danger could be met within South Viet Nam itself."

It added, however, that the past was not providing adequately for the defence of South Viet Nam against Hanoi's open aggression.

Without specifying what kind, it said the United States in South Viet Nam "will continue necessary measures of defence against the Communist armed aggression coming from North Viet Nam."

Viet Cong guerrillas, who once relied largely on locally-captured arms, now are receiving "large and increasing quantities" of military supplies from North Viet Nam, much of it originally coming from Communist China and other Communist countries, the report said.

An increasing number of weapons from outside Communist sources have been seized in South Viet Nam. Many of the new weapons cannot be used with captured ammunition and depend on outside supply.

One captured Viet Cong soldier reported that his entire company had been supplied with modern Chinese weapons. More recent "dramatic proof" was the capture on the South Vietnamese coast of a cargo ship carrying thousands of weapons and more than a million rounds of ammunition.

Muhammad:

'Enemies Want My Life'

CHICAGO (UPI)—Black Muslim leader Elijah Muhammad, speaking behind a solid phalanx of karate-trained bodyguards told his followers Friday that his enemies are "out to kill me."

He exhorted the Muslims to "protect yourselves."

Muhammad castigated Black Nationalist leader Malcolm X, a defector from the Muslim hierarchy who was slain in New York last Sunday, as an enemy who "criticized, criticized, criticized... and got what he preached."

The 67-year-old, self-styled "messenger of Allah" speaking at the first session of a three-day convention, vowed that he would not let anybody "destroy" the black supremacy sect.

"If the police can't put a stop to it, we can put a stop to it," he told the cheering faithful.

The only trouble came when Muslim minister Louis X of Boston shouted "we have a traitor in our midst" and pointed to Ben Holman, a Negro reporter for the Columbia Broadcasting System who once posed as a Muslim while working for the Chicago Daily News. Holman was hustled out of the building.

Muslim Held In Murder

NEW YORK (AP)—The first direct police link-up of the Black Muslims to the assassination of Malcolm X came Friday, with the arrest of a husky Negro member of the militant anti-white sect. Held without bail on a homicide charge, he was the second man accused in the slaying.

Since Malcolm, 39, was shot down Sunday, police have worked on the theory that his bitter 1963 break with Elijah Muhammad's Chicago-based Black Muslims lay behind the slaying. Muhammad has denied any complicity.

Early Friday police arrested Norman 3X Butler, 28, a reported member of Muhammad's elite guard of discipline enforcers.

Norman 3X was charged with "acting in concert" in Malcolm's slaying with Talmadge Hayer, 22.

The Establishments

Corporate Influence

By RON FOULTON
(Third in a series)

If you want to find the real Canadian titans of finance, pick the daisies in the corporate field by studying some of the 13,500-000 books in Canada's libraries and the directorships of a few dozen companies.

Then, struggle to the top of a pyramid of government statistics which disclose that since 1951 the number of privately-owned companies, partnerships and co-ops has been steadily dropping while the number of incorporated companies has been steadily increasing.

Incorporated companies employ more than 95 per cent of the workers in rubber, paper, primary metals, transportation, electrical equipment, tobacco products, machinery, chemicals, petroleum and coal products, textiles and knitting mills, and metal fabricating.

With 92.9 per cent of the labor force in manufacturing, few Canadians stray far from the corporate influence even if they never know who owns what.

The view from the pyramid is too hazy to spot the Titans of Finance in order of riches.

Private companies, like the mercantile empire presided over by 55-year-old John David Easton, do not, for instance, have to issue financial statements publicly. And while it is known that the T. Eaton Co. is the largest single employer next to the CNR and the government itself, the rest is speculation.

Foreign investment — three-quarters of it American money and tripled since the Second World War—also contributes to the haze. American money probably controls more than 5,000 so-called Canadian businesses.

The haze thickens even more because government regulations are deliberately designed to keep vital information between the titan and the tax man, and away from the inquisitive public.

The cloak is contained in a clause in the Statistics Act of 1948 which reads: "No report, summary of statistics or other publication under this act shall contain any of the particulars comprised in any individual return so arranged as to enable any person to identify any particular person."

COUNSEL FOR U.S.

Pierre Lamontagne of Montreal, counsel for the U.S., complained to the RCMP Aug. 11 that Raymond Denis, then executive assistant to the immigration minister, offered him a $20,000 bribe July 14 to agree to Rivard's release on bail.

Mr. Lamontagne also said he was subjected to political pressure in phone calls from Mr. Rouleau and Andre Letendre and Guy Lord, aides to Justice Minister Favreau.

PROBE SUSPENDED

Mr. Lemieux testified that Mr. Favreau "suspended" the RCMP investigation of these allegations Sept. 18 without having seen the RCMP report on the questioning of Mr. Rouleau Sept. 17.

He said that at a Sept. 18 meeting among Mr. Favreau, Commissioner McLellan, then Immigration Minister Tremblay and himself the justice minister was told that the RCMP considered Denis guilty of wrongdoing but there was not enough evidence to prosecute.

INTERNAL DISCIPLINE

He read a memo he wrote for the files four days later which said Mr. Favreau decided the case was one "for internal discipline" and now was a matter for Mr. Tremblay, Denis' boss then and now postmaster-general.

Denis left the government service last October but it was never established whether he was fired or allowed to resign.

NO DISCUSSION

Deputy Commissioner Lemieux said the Sept. 18 meeting lasted about an hour. There was no discussion of referring the RCMP report to Mr. Favreau's legal officers.

Mr. Tremblay had been "very surprised that Denis could have done such a thing and I understood his position because Denis appeared to be in somewhat of a predicament."

CHANGED OPINION

At first Mr. Tremblay had not been satisfied of Denis' guilt but after some discussion "I believe Mr. Tremblay changed his opinion."

Regarding Mr. Favreau's view that it was a matter for "internal discipline," Deputy Commissioner Lemieux said: "My minister expressed an opinion and when he expressed an opinion I have to respect it."

WOULD ACT

He said that as a result of the meeting his impression was that if more information turned up action would be taken.

Chief Justice Dorian asked how the RCMP was going to get more evidence if there was no more investigation.

The witness replied "some information might come to our attention."

FILE 'SUSPENDED'

The file had been "suspended," not closed, he said. Mr. Favreau had been "anxious that the matter be finalized."

Guy Guerin, counsel for Denis unsuccessfully applied to be stricken from the inquiry record

Deputy Commissioner Lemieux stated that either Mr. Favreau, Mr. Tremblay or Commissioner McLellan remained a key figure in the case.

The witness said that when Mr. Favreau turned to Mr. Tremblay and said the matter now was one for Mr. Tremblay to handle, he considered it a directive that the RCMP part in the case had ended.

The meeting had ended with Mr. Favreau saying the RCMP had "acquitted" themselves of responsibility and the matter was one for Mr. Tremblay to deal with from then on.

MONTH AFTER

Deputy Commissioner Lemieux was questioned repeatedly by Mr. Desjardins and Francois Even, Creditiste counsel about the RCMP not having questioned Mr. Rouleau until Sept. 17, more than a month after the investigation started.

Deputy Commissioner Lemieux said the force was working on the theory—he said later it wasn't necessarily a correct theory—that a conspiracy led to Mr. Rouleau.

Mr. Rouleau had been saved to the last because the RCMP wanted "to have all the ammunition we could get to face him with."

Without Telling

It is even possible for a company to sell itself without disclosing the name of the buyer to minority shareholders.

U.S. laws are not so secretive.

Any company, including Canadian, selling shares on a U.S. market must report the salaries of its senior executives.

So, it is known that Samuel Bronfman, chairman of Distillers-Scargant, was paid $331,475 in 1963; Nathaniel Davis, who at 49 heads a $2,000,000 network of companies as president of Aluminum Ltd., got $125,000; John D. Harrington, president of McIntyre Porcupine Mines, collected $101,200.

Taxes took a big chunk ($100,000 winds up as $48,420 in pocket); but, then, they had other sources of income to keep them warm.

But One of Three

Under the definition of this series, only one of those three men can be classed as a Titan in that he is a Canadian and that he built and controls a huge corporation with international connections. The man is Samuel Bronfman. But the others are members of the Financial Establishment.

The protection of government regulations and the steadfast resistance of Canadian entrepreneurs to disclose their wealth invites what, to them, must be amusing speculation.

It also sends investigators through a broadloomed jungle screen with increasing hints.

For instance, the 1963-64 Canada Year Book, which works on statistics that are incomplete or lagged, lists the ten leading manufacturing industries.

Not Separated

They are: Pulp and paper mills, smelting and refining, petroleum refining, slaughtering and meat packing, motor vehicle manufacturing, iron and steel mills, saw mills, manufacture of industrial chemicals, pasteurizing plants and food manufacturers.

Neither the year book nor any other government publication names individual manufacturers. Nor do they separate Canadian-owned firms from American subsidiaries.

But busy DBS workers love to make lists which at least point in the general direction of the very rich.

In 1960, Canadian bakeries produced 259,203,977 pounds of biscuits. And that's the way the cookie crumbled for Garfield Weston.

Golden Cascade

About 238,731,690 gallons of beer, ale, stout and porter were sold. And for E. P. Taylor it was a golden cascade.

Canada also produced 322,409 passenger cars. And for Col. R. S. McLaughlin, the fourth largest shareholder in General particulars as published as being particulars relating to any individual person or business.

Translated, this means that the Dominion Bureau of Statistics would break the law if it issued production statistics on any product made by only a few companies.

One DBS man says:

"Sometimes we get quite frustrated. We can't, for instance, report how many razor blades were made in Canada in any year because so few companies make them. We have to lump them in with scissors."

"Say you were in the business of stuffing alligators. Not too many people do that. The government protects you by refusing to give out any statistics. Invasion of privacy, and all that."

Lack of government regulations also fogs the view from the pyramid. Company annual reports do not have to be explicit; therefore, they are often vague. Canadian companies do not even have to tell their shareholders how much their executives are paid.

Canada also produced 322,409 passenger cars. And for Col. R. S. McLaughlin, the fourth largest shareholder in General Motors, this was reason enough to tout a horn.

Such men are members of the Financial Establishment because of wealth and influence. They and others will be discussed in later chapters of this series.

There are, of course, other inner groups which shape and chart the course of Canadian life: the universities, the Church, the Law, Medicine, Labor, and the image makers of the Advertising world.

'Myriad Ways'

Prof. John Porter, sociologist of Carleton University, has written: "They impinge on our lives in a myriad of ways. It may be a uniform kind of beer, a standard rate of interest from the banks, the transferable academic credit, the industry-wide contract, or the Christian view of divorce."

But the Financial Establishment is the most powerful of the influential groups. This is because of the labor it employs, the taxes it pays, the international trade it heats, the political parties it supports and the former politicians it employs.

It is apparent that as long as there are more followers than leaders, the leaders will always get the prize.

Prizes Huge

The prizes are huge, as one study decided when it found 12 Argus Corporation directors holding 150 directorships in banks, insurance and trust companies.

At the end of 1964, the market value of Argus investments was $215,600,000, including big chunks of Massey-Ferguson, Dominion Stores, Canadian Breweries, Dominion Tar and Chemicals, B.C. Forest Products, Hollinger Consolidated and Standard Radio.

The energy and acumen of men such as these directors never fails to amaze. Some of them have tried to instruct lesser mortals in the arts of becoming a multi-millionaire, but the result is never more than platitudes.

Either you've got it or you haven't.

'Someone to Do'

The late Col. Eric Phillips once said: "One of the secrets of being an executive is never to do something you can get someone to do for you."

Power in the hands of the few has bothered some student economists for years. They appear to have the strongbox of success locked against all comers. But this is not true. Their circle is being joined and challenged in every decade.

Jean Louis Levesque, now only 33 and a bank clerk in the thirties, broke into the circle to become known as the "E. P. Taylor of Quebec."

Basically a buyer instead of a builder, he controls through his $200,000,000 Trans-Canada Corporation Fund the Industrial Life Assurance Co. (with business in force approaching $1,000,000,000) two racetracks, the bond house of L. G. Beaubien et Cie Ltée; hotels; department stores; textile mills and dress shops.

Of 25 Firms

He is chairman or president or vice-president or director of some 25 companies and sits on the board of the Provincial Bank where he got his start on a borrowed $5,000.

Mr. Levesque exudes the aura of money without being flashy. When he flies to the track in Toronto, he brings along 25 or 30 friends.

An employee said: "Basically, he's a man of simple tastes. He likes to go to his winter place at St. Agathe and ride his skidoo on the trails. If he goes to Florida, he stays in hotels."

Corporate Web of Influence

The ranks of the Establishment also opened for Paul Desmarais, who was born in Sudbury in 1927 and who, in February, 1964, increased his $9,000,000 interest in the Imperial Life Assurance Co. of Canada to 50.5 per cent.

Dislikes 'Tycoon'

Like Mr. Levesque, Mr. Desmarais is self-made. He does not like the word "tycoon"; but he owns more than 50 per cent of Transportation Management Corporation (of Montreal) which owns more than 50 per cent of Geco Enterprises Ltd., which owns 50 per cent of Imperial Life.

Startled Editors

He's also the man who ran a measured mile last year in six minutes and once started a roomful of flashy editors by walking around on his hands.

Such men lead hectic lives. Dr. William P. Sheppard, former medical director of the Metropolitan Insurance Co., coined the term "executivitis" to fit them.

He called it a state of mind stemming from egocentricity which brings on "feelings of omniscience, know-all, see-all."

Saunders once told a Toronto audience: "The worst advice ever given by a father to his son has been the over-rated phrase, 'Neither a borrower nor a lender be.'"

He was 22, with $1,500 in the bank when he plunged into the automobile financing business. In February, 1964, he applied for a charter to start his own bank.

Max Bell, at 52, is an even more striking western entrepreneur. He was once the largest single shareholder in the Hudson's Bay Company and now is chairman of a federation of seven major Canadian daily newspapers, a director of the bank of Nova Scotia and the CPR.

Mr. Bell may make news as a race horse owner, being a partner with Frank McMahon in a $1,000,000 horse farm at Okotoks, Alta., or a plunger in CPR stock which he began buying into heavily when it was $19 a share.

the driver was probably unable to see the child because of drifts.

City snow removers estimated the mop-up would cost a million dollars.

PARKING BANNED

Police Chief James Mackey declared all downtown streets
"emergency routes," and put a ban on downtown parking and stopping.

Biggest snowfall was at Parry Sound, where 30 inches was recorded. At Windsor, there was 16 inches.

More than 16 inches fell on runways at Toronto International Airport, which resumed operations after a day of cancelled flights.

JUDGE DIES

One of the heart attack victims was Judge Eric Cross, 61, a former minister of municipal affairs and attorney general in Ontario. Judge Cross was stricken while trudging through the snow near his home at Woodstock.

The fierce winds took a toll of flags. At Queen's Park, the new maple leaf flag which was raised less than two weeks ago was shredded.

American Plantations Seized by Indonesia

JAKARTA (UPI)—Indonesia plantations in North Sumatra announced Friday it was taking The value of the seized property over American-owned rubber was estimated at $80,000,000.

The seizure was the latest anti-American move in a series of Indonesian developments that included the closing of American libraries, quitting the United Nations and the tightening of economic ties with Communist China.

DECREE SIGNED

Estates Minister Frans Seda read a decree signed by Foreign Minister Subandrio which announced the seizure of plantations owned by the U.S. Rubber Co. of New York, and the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. of Akron, Ohio. It marked the first time Indonesia has directly seized American property and it was believed moves would soon be made against other American holdings in Indonesia.

(A spokesman for the Goodyear Company in New York said his firm had been notified by the state department of the takeover).

RIGHTS RECOGNIZED

The decree said the estates would be managed by the Indonesian government but "recognized" the ownership rights of the Americans.

Informed sources said Indonesian labor teams were installed on the American plantations.

Subandrio and Seda returned Friday from a three-day visit to Medan, the capital of North Sumatra, to settle the takeover.

U.S. Case Against 17 Going Ahead

MERIDIAN, Miss (UPI)—
The government said Friday it would go ahead with its watered-down case that could bring, at most, light prison terms for 17 white men charged in last summer's slaying of three civil rights workers.

Shortly after Mrs. Fannie Lou Chaney, mother of one of the slain workers, and a dozen other demonstrators marched on the federal building with placards reading:

"Murder is a misdemeanor in Mississippi," and "Impeach Cox."

The latter slogan referred to Judge Harold Cox, who struck down a key section of the government's case when he ruled the suspects could not be tried on felony charges—which could have resulted in 10-year jail terms.

Reds Launch Cosmos 58

LONDON (Reuters)—Russia has launched another unmanned satellite, Cosmos 58, Tass news agency reported Friday. Tass said Cosmos 58, the fifth to be sent into space this week, will initially circle the earth every 86.8 minutes at a height of about 400 miles.

Crisis . . . or Not?

THOUGH BOTH the findings and the tone of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism's interim report may be viewed with some skepticism in certain quarters, its broad conclusion that Quebec poses a major threat to Confederation will hardly be disputed by the majority of Canadians.

Events of the past two years have made it very clear that the people of Quebec are dissatisfied with their present role in the Canadian community and are prepared to go to almost any lengths to achieve an improved status for themselves in the political, cultural and social structure of this country.

The royal commission simply verifies this fact.

But it also goes further by openly stating that in its opinion the Quebec dispute has already reached the proportions of a major national crisis—a state of affairs long suspected by many Canadians but always hotly denied by both the federal and Quebec governments.

Yet, it cannot help but be noted, despite striking this note of urgency the report offers nothing in the way of solutions other than suggesting wide-ranging negotiations at the government and grass-roots level to bring about major changes in the present situation.

Presumably the commissioners believe, contrary to the impression of immediacy contained in their own report, that the crisis can very well hang fire for another two years when they will then make their recommendations of concrete "adjustments and accommodations."

If things are as bad as the commission report indicates, can Canada wait that long?

The Right Location

ACCORDING to a report from Britain, the Hudson's Bay Company, after having had its head office in London for 295 years, is giving some thought to moving the headquarters to Canada. The reason for contemplating the transfer is that the company, the main part of whose business is in retail operations across this country, sees a threat of new corporation tax provisions in Britain discriminating against firms with the bulk of their trading interests overseas.

That the oldest incorporated British trading company still in existence is considering pulling up its ancient roots in England is amply interesting in its own right; but a paragraph in the report in The Times of London is, perhaps, of particular significance to Victoria; certainly it is intriguing.

The North American head office of the Hudson's Bay Company is in Winnipeg. The natural expectation would be that the headquarters of the whole company would be transferred to that city. But the report says it is believed that Winnipeg is ruled out because of "limitations imposed by the hard winters there."

It may be too hopeful to suggest that the company already has its eyes on Victoria. But climatically, socially and in its surroundings Victoria would ideally fill the bill; historically, also, having been the western extreme of the company's vast domain; the city might aptly beckon.

The Chamber of Commerce and city council should at any rate be on their toes. Head offices of large companies are just the sort of development Victoria needs.

Way-Out Junk

KEEPING TRACK of traffic in space is getting to be a bigger and bigger job. The NORAD News Service says the North American Air Defence Command's tabulators have catalogued 1,000 man-made objects out there, of which slightly more than 500 are still going, the rest having "decayed."

It is worth noting that while Russia has been ahead in some aspects of space exploration, the Americans have by far the larger number of "payloads" in the sky: 112 of those in orbit belong to the United States, 15 to the U.S.S.R., and one each to Canada and Italy. The United States has 13 objects in deep space and Russia six.

The rest of the objects going their rounds are merely bits and pieces; scrap metal.

At last, it seems, the world has found a place to dump junk where it doesn't very much matter.

Saskatchewan's Example

I WAS interested to read in the Colonist that Saskatchewan's new Liberal government has fulfilled a major election promise to cut taxes. Particularly intriguing was the decision to lower the provincial sales tax from five to four per cent effective immediately.

It seems to me I can recall vaguely some talk, prior to Premier Bennett's first election, about reducing the B.C. sales tax. It subsequently increased.

Possibly our premier could take one of his famous "second looks" in view of the record surplus he has accumulated each year. I'm not sure why it's necessary to have a $20 or $30 million surplus each year in the face of the obvious need in many areas such as hospitals and education, but I expect most people would appreciate a drop in the sales tax as a long overdue relief.

Children's Books

Thank you for printing the article by John Ruddy in The Islander, entitled, "Once upon a time . . . there were decent books for children." For some time I have been really disturbed to see our children's bookshelves—in stores, in homes and in libraries—filled with juvenile, senseless rubbish, illustrated with the most grotesque and unmetrical drawings.

The men who will lead our nation tomorrow are today's children, and they should be nourished—mentally—with this kind of view.

Those millions of unrealistic books, which Mr. Ruddy rightly designates as "bilge," cannot build strong, moral, right-minded characters.

I was born during the reign of good Queen Victoria, when stories for children almost invariably contained a good moral, and the authors were not ashamed to mention God. That is probably why I did not turn out as a juvenile delinquent!

GLADYS HAMERSLEY,
Comox.

Wary of Dogma

Re the recent article deploring the "spiritual starvation of today's children," the spiritual life referred to would seem to be of a restricted nature. By his comments on "militant atheism" preventing "improvement" the author implies that organized religions have a monopoly on matters of morals and ethics. The schools have a duty to encourage a desire for knowledge and a search for truth but should be very wary of any excursions into the field of dogma.

The obvious answer to the "threat" of militant atheism is an increase in the number of militant Christians. But let both avoid smear tactics!

Granting also, for the purposes of this discussion, that it is a parent's duty "to see that his child is brought up as a practicing, believing and instructed Christian," by what process of mental juggling does this then become the teacher's responsibility?

As a teacher I am well aware of the "spiritual starvation of today's children" but it is evident rather in the attitude prevalent today which regards education as a means to an end (e.g. "the best jobs go to school graduates"); I learn just enough to pass exams) rather than as an end in itself.

The Post-Khrushchev Regime

Period of Cautious Overhaul

By ISAAC DEUTSCHER
(First of Three Articles)

THE most characteristic feature of the post-Khrushchev regime, now in its fifth month, is the unobtrusiveness and tactfulness of its leaders. It looks as if they had taken an oath that not one of them would seek popularity for himself so that none should be able to rise above his colleagues of the presidium and establish a personal ascendancy.

After the torments of Mr. Khrushchev's loquacity, silence is once again considered golden; only absolute political necessity entitles a leader to exchange it for the silver of a public speech. And so it took a storm over Asia for the new prime minister to be able, on his Far Eastern tour, to make his first important political pronouncements.

(At home he had so far spoken in public only once, at the Supreme Soviet in December; but he did this as chief economic planner, rather than as prime minister; and what he gave the Soviet was an almost non-political annual routine report on the state of the Soviet economy.)

Mr. Brezhnev, the party's new first secretary, has not so far opened his mouth even once. He has not given even a hint of a public explanation of how and why he has taken his office and what are the differences, if any, between his and his predecessor's policies. There is more than a whiff of Stalinism in this secrecy; and perhaps even Stalin might have been less reticent in such circumstances.

What is going on behind this thick veil of discretion?

Mr. Khrushchev's successors are still assessing the legacy they have taken over and trying to find out how much of it they can preserve and how much they must discard. They are also rearranging, redistributing, and overhauling the levers and instruments of power.

For the second time since Stalin an attempt is being made to separate to some extent the powers of party and state—the previous attempt was made in 1953, when Mr. Malenkov was prime minister and Mr. Khrushchev became first secretary. Many Soviet citizens hope that much good will result from a relative duality of power; some see in it the pre-condition for a genuine growth of civil liberties.

The idea has a long history: already in the early days of Stalin's autocracy N. Bukharin, the great theorist of the "right opposition," had reached the conclusion that "the root of all evil in our system of government is that party and state are so completely merged."

It is remarkable that after nearly four decades people are now arriving at this conclusion quite independently and are trying to get at that "root of all evil."

Yet, while the prerogatives of party and state are being disentangled, each of these two machines of power is being remodelled and reintegrated so as to overcome the effects of some of Mr. Khrushchev's disavowals and decentralizing arrangements.

The real power continues to reside in the party. The first secretary still carries far more

From the Scriptures

In the Name of News

THE longer one lives in the United States, the more one is forced to wonder whether, in being charged with a destructively emotional response to events, the American people are more sinned against than sinning.

To say this is not to deny that there is a barn-wide streak of emotionalism in their political responses, but it is possible to argue that this would remain in proportion if it were not for television commentators, news readers and reporters on all three networks.

The recently increased violence of the Viet Nam situation is an excellent example. From experience in only one small segment of the national scene, the only conclusion one can draw is that the people in general have been less emotional about the Viet Nam strikes than the news reporters, commentators and reporters.

If you must cram as many as 25 "stories" into a 30-minute newscast—minus time for commercials—some of them are necessarily no more than paragraphs, dependent for their impact on skilled condensation—always a dangerous skill—tone, inflection and facial expression.

When flag-draped coffins are unloaded at a California air base, and filmed by batteries of cameras—they have been coming in for over a year but this was suddenly a dramatic occasion for television news—and the reporter with a break in his voice solemnly reels off the names and rank of the dead as they are disembarked, the effect is not of news but of drama. It is great stuff from television's point of view but it is stage business rather than news reporting. When CBS secures a Viet Cong propaganda film and transmits it in three parts with added commentary that consists in part of distressed surprise that guerrillas engaged in a war should be so unfair as to be effective, the effect is more conclusive of alarm than of sober thought.

the party's supreme authority; then the process of decision-making becomes complex and slow.

I am not proposing to indulge in the Kremlinologists' favorite game and to discuss here personalities or speculate on the chances of Messrs. Podgorny, Suslov or Novikov and on their respective attitudes towards either Mr. Brezhnev or Mr. Kosygin. The constellation of these Kremlin stars is highly capricious and elusive. It is also largely irrelevant, as those who so recently still saw Mr. Khrushchev as the irremovable dictator, and Fred Kozlov as his heir apparent, should have learned by now.

Far more stable, important, and clear are the basic alignments on which the men of the presidium depend, for neither the presidium nor the central committee acts in a vacuum. Within the central committee and around it there are powerful lobbies and pressure groups which represent multiple sectional interests in a perpetual interplay of conflict and common action. The spokesmen of the most powerful lobbies have direct access to the presidium, whose sessions they often attend, if not as parties to conflicts, then as experts and consultants.

The next article will give a tentative listing of these lobbies and pressure groups in the approximate order of their importance.

It meets frequently, once or twice a week. In an emergency or in a grave international crisis, it can be called together at a moment's notice.

It can act swiftly and with determination, as long as it is not torn by a sharp internal division. In case of such a division the large and cumbersome central committee assumes its role as

An Emotional Bombardment

By ISAAC DEUTSCHER from Lowell, Mass.

When television commentators grandly assure the viewers that the air strikes to the north have taught the Hanoi regime a lesson—what lesson is not specified but presumably about American power—or that the American fleet and air arm in the China Sea could "wipe China off the map," they do the American people no great favor by stimulating illusions about their enemies to which they are already prone enough and which in the past have led them into humiliating errors.

Television news in this recent flurry of activity has been in a definite public disservice, at least unhelpful. It is one thing to dramatize American power in the air and at sea and to emphasize that China cannot match this power in the event of war. It is quite another thing to omit from this emotional assurance the equally relevant fact that without the use of nuclear bombs neither air nor sea power can win a war against China.

A war against China—without nuclear weapons—would have to be won on the ground and the Korean experience should warn any reason-a-ble commentator that when it was over—and problematically if it were "won"—America would be a second class power drained of economic strength and two generations.

To underestimate the Chinese, or their capacity for sacrifice and endurance, their military skill and power, or their positive genius for improvisation is hardly a public service.

Television cameras bring also to the nervous living room, the wounded who for many months have returned home unobserved and are now suddenly enlisted on commentaries on the qualities of their Vietnamese allies and the progress of the war.

The military opinions of a specialist fourth class may be of enormous value to the United States army command. They may be spiced in a seriously the party's supreme authority; then the process of decision-making becomes complex and slow.

I am not proposing to indulge in the Kremlinologists' favorite game and to discuss here personalities or speculate on the chances of Messrs. Podgorny, Suslov or Novikov and on their respective attitudes towards either Mr. Brezhnev or Mr. Kosygin. The constellation of these Kremlin stars is highly capricious and elusive. It is also largely irrelevant, as those who so recently still saw Mr. Khrushchev as the irremovable dictator, and Fred Kozlov as his heir apparent, should have learned by now.

Far more stable, important, and clear are the basic alignments on which the men of the presidium depend, for neither the presidium nor the central committee acts in a vacuum.

Within the central committee and around it there are powerful lobbies and pressure groups which represent multiple sectional interests in a perpetual interplay of conflict and common action. The spokesmen of the most powerful lobbies have direct access to the presidium, whose sessions they often attend, if not as parties to conflicts, then as experts and consultants.

The next article will give a tentative listing of these lobbies and pressure groups in the approximate order of their importance.

The Reichstag in Berlin was destroyed by fire 32 years ago today—in 1933—at a time when Germany's fledgling Nazi Party needed to draw attention to itself and have a scapegoat for its own actions. Although set by the Nazis, the fire was blamed by them on many of their political opponents, especially the Communists. The fire took place a short time after Adolf Hitler had been elected chancellor of the country.

1887 — Russian composer Alexander Borodin died.

1900 — The decisive Battle of Paardeburg saw the defeat of Boer forces and the eventual formation of the Union of South Africa by the British as a result.

First World War: Fifty years ago today—in 1915—Russian troops halted a new German drive on Warsaw and recaptured Przemyśl; French troops captured extensive trench system in Champagne; Admiral Hugo von Pohl was appointed to command the German fleet.

Second World War: Twenty-five years ago today—in 1940—Winston Churchill told the British House of Commons that the Scapa Flow naval base was out of commission following the sinking of the Royal Oak carrier; Finland's Arctic army was reported to be retreating in the face of increasing Russian armor; France requisitioned the services of 7,000,000 farmers for spring planting.

To Disappear

Proud Shield

By CHARLOTTE WHITTON

DISSENT from the laziness of mind that tends to accept complacently that, because the flag question is settled, a new heaven and a new earth of national unity are opening before us.

We have scuttled one flag, come up with two others; one, it is true, a new Canadian flag (a poor thing but our own); the second, "the Jack of the Commonwealth," for compromise use (to get the first one through); and third, no one seems to know how many flags of provincial designation and loyalty.

And we hail all this as an achievement of patriots and statesmen, in a great triumph of unity!

Unity! The first Red Leaf has just been run up on its official staff, and already the hunt is in full course again to chuck the Crown and God Save the Queen.

God save Canada, say I, and let us have the courage and honesty to face the facts upon us.

Democracy is the rule of the majority, freely ascertained and justly executed, with due consideration to the interests of the minority.

But the majority in any free society have rights, no less than the minority.

If just honoring of rights is to prevail, the majority must firmly resist all such claims of privilege, for there comes a limit beyond which concession and compromise, even to a worthy end, cannot be justified if the price be the shattering of fact and the shedding of principle.

That limit of tolerance draws perilously near the danger line for an enlarging majority of Canadians throughout this country if the increasingly insistent, and to some degree, unjustifiable demands continue for the elimination as the price of a so-called unity, of the symbols and even the institutions which are an integral part of this country's inheritance.

We are a young new country. It is true, with our destiny opening before us. But we are not a parvenu among the peoples of the world.

Until these last few decades, we had not done badly in our nation-building. With resolute will and faith in freedom, we had, the majority of us, acquired ourselves well in two World Wars and have been taking a part in these years of post-war development and world service.

We have a new Canadian flag—or flags—and at what price? Is anyone clear as to where the shield of Canada's armorial bearings has gone off the Red Ensign?

Does discarding the Red Ensign mean we're holding on to the Union Jack just a little longer to appease those who would otherwise have stopped the red leaf flag?

Does discard that proud, significant armorial shield, and, when Parliament and the people are otherwise engaged, do some alchemical surgery on Canada's coat-of-arms?

That is very important, for that new grant of arms of Nov. 20, 1921, made at our own request, put the seal as it were on Canada's autonomy, whereby, through the blood and sacrifice of war, Sir Robert Borden asserted our right to sign the 1919 peace documents in our own name.

I am a Canadian but I cling to the glorious rubric crosses of the old Jack. St. Andrew's cross is that of the follower of John the Baptist, the first of the disciples, who brought his brother Simon Peter into the Apostolic band.

Andrew is the revered saint of my fellow Canadians of Greek, Balkan, Russian and Polish origin, as is St. George, not only of the English but of all the Canadians of the Eastern Orthodox faith, and St. Patrick, revered in the annals of Gaul, Italy, Rome as of Ireland.

I dissent from the unseemly haste to hoist all that is left of a flag, proudly flown for 75 years, until we had been given a more forthright statement from Parliament, as to the status of our Arms, and as to what of our institutions and traditions are next slated for the guillotine.

With the Classics

Honor and shame from no condition rise;

Act well your part, there all the honor lies.

Fortune in men has some small difference made;

One flaunts in rags, one flutters in brocade;

The cobbler apron'd and the parson gown'd,

The friar hooded, and the monarch crown'd.

'What differ more,' you cry, 'than crows or cowls?'

I'll tell you friend! a wise man and a fool.

You'll find, if once the monarch acts the monk,

Or, cobbler-like, the parson will be drunk.

Worth makes the man, and want of it, the fellow;

The rest is all but leather or prunella.

Park Reappraisal Vital

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan said Friday it is time B.C. made a complete reappraisal of its larger provincial parks.

To try "and run parks with existing mineral claims and timber berths, the minister told the legislature, it is like being "handed a time bomb with a lighted fuse."

UNREALISTIC

To continue under existing conditions is "totally unrealistic" and unacceptable from the standpoint of practical administration, said Mr. Kiernan.

He spoke in moving second reading of the new Parks Act, first of its kind in B.C., introduced in the House Thursday.

WILL BE PROTECTED

"Fortunately," Mr. Kiernan said, "we have more than 140 Class A parks that have no alienations within their boundaries and these will be protected."

We also have substantial areas of the larger parks that have no alienations and about 2,100 park reserve areas, not yet named as parks, where we are not burdened with any private holdings."

CONFIRM ORDER

The new act confirms a cabinet order last year giving complete protection to all parks under 5,000 acres.

In the next few years, the minister said, B.C. will have to reclassify some parks, zoning portions of other parks, and setting aside new park areas.

BORDERS ALTERED

Some parks will be made larger and boundaries in many will be altered to conform with natural contours of land and water, he said.

"This policy brought to fruition will preserve for all time the essential features of the ecology of B.C.," said Mr. Kiernan.

FOR POSTERITY

It will provide recreational areas for a future population many times the size of B.C.'s present 1,700,000 people.

The government will not pick up "discards of lakefront and seafloor locations," said Mr. Kiernan, but will select and preserve for public use the very best of these as new areas of the province open up.

LIVING MUSEUMS

Nature conservancy areas will be set up in parks like Strathcona as living museums of B.C. natural history, he said.

Areas chosen for this completely protected status will range from alpine meadows to mature stands of coastal fir and cedar in the rain forests. Access will be rigidly controlled.

MUST FACE REALITIES

"If you want an intelligent parks program," said Mr. Kiernan, "realities must be faced."

One of these realities, the minister said, is the fact that some commercial facilities must be supplied in park areas set aside for recreation.

COMMERCIAL ASPECT

"Before we jump off into the wild blue yonder, let me explain that anyone who sells a cup of coffee or a sandwich in a park is carrying on a commercial operation," he said.

Those who want to go horseback riding in a park need trails and someone to rent them horses, he said. The list when the full range of outdoor recreation activities is considered is a lengthy one.

MUST BE PRACTICAL

The minister said he expected "cries of park desecration" from well-meaning but uninformed sources.

But any parks program must be both practical and based upon the reality of existing facts, he said.

Existing allegations within Class A parks "can come to life at any time either as the result of mineral claims moving to the development stage or timber berths moving to the cutting stage," he said.

To attempt to think otherwise is "merely a wishful observation," said Mr. Kiernan.

In the new closed nature conservancies, which will have no alienations, protection will be afforded not only from all types of industrial encroachment but against the wrong kind of public use as well.

Not Telling Children

Parents Shun Facts of Life

A goodly number of B.C. parents are not telling their children the facts of life, Welfare Minister Black said in the legislature Friday.

These parents are "passing the buck off" to teachers, ministers and social workers, Mr. Black said.

PARENTS OBJECT

He said previous attempts to handle sex education in high schools failed because some parents objected that the classes were taking away rights of the home.

The minister was replying to a request from Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby) to have the education department institute new courses to help young people prepare for life.

UNWEED MOTHERS

The exchange occurred during second reading of a bill covering children of unwed mothers.

Mr. Black agreed to recommend to Education Minister Peterson that "perhaps we should have another go" at sex education in schools.

VERY YOUNG

One of the most alarming facets of the rising tide of illegitimate births in the province, he said, was the number of very young girls who become unwed mothers.

"But the community at large must still accept responsibility for these matters. No do-gooder committee, church or school can take the place of the home," Mr. Black said.

No Sign of Chinese At Communist Meeting

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Top delegations from the world's Communist parties continued to arrive here Friday for Monday's Communist conference.

But it was expected the Chinese and their ideological allies would boycott the meeting.

Raul Castro, Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's brother and armed forces minister and deputy premier, arrived in a regular Soviet airliner from Havana.

Italian, East German and Czechoslovakian delegations arrived earlier and the remaining representatives were expected today.

Russian leaders invited 25 other parties to take part in the meeting but it was still not known how many will attend.

Every year, more than 300,000 handmade articles of clothing and bedding are shipped overseas to needy victims of disaster and strife by the Women's Work Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

'Gestapo' Pension Clause Blasted

OTTAWA (UPI)—Provisions for enforcing the Canada Pension Plan Friday drew cries of "Gestapo" and "informers" from an aroused Commons opposition that forced temporary government retreat on the enforcement clause.

A bitter 1½-hour debate on the clause marked an otherwise productive day as the House comtinued to move with reasonable speed through the "non-controversial" clauses of the complex contributory wage-related legislation.

Continuing the unusual spirit of co-operation developed Thursday night, the House passed four sections in rapid succession before running into clause 26.

It enables revenue department officials "at any reasonable time" to enter "any premises or place" and examine "any property, including any books, records, writings, or other documents."

And the cry went up.

Gordon Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka), chief Conservative critic during the week-long debate, said there was nothing to prevent department officials from going through "every file, document and every safe" in any office.

WARRANT URGED

"I think one of the most fundamental freedoms Canadians now possess is the right not to be interfered with by inspectors . . . acting under . . . instructions of a minister of the crown."

Mr. Aiken said a search warrant should be required before entering any premises.

"This is just adding several more cubits to the bureaucratic Frankenstein we are building in our various departments of government," added former Tory veterans' affairs minister Marcel Lambert.

PRIVATE PAPERS

Former defence minister Douglas Harkness said it would allow an investigator "to go through all private papers of the family including a wife's private correspondence, the love-letters of a man's daughter and anything else."

Revenue Minister Benson denied there was any right for "someone to search through everyone's personal correspondence" in the clause.

MAY BE LYING

"Is this the way this plan is going to be operated?" asked Conservative House leader Gordon Churchill. "Are employees now to be informers against employers?"

And Conservative C. S. Smallwood (Battle River-Camrose) said it would allow the government to "send their Gestapo agents across this country checking every Canadian."

After a hurried consultation between Benson and Liberal House leader George McBratney, the government allowed the clause to stand for later debate.

NDP, Liberals Hurl Charges

Vote Probe Sparks Turmoil

OTTAWA (UPI)—Alleged British Columbia election irregularities threw a jittery House of Commons into another steaming debate Friday with members of the Liberal and New Democrat parties hurling charges across the floor.

It started when Creditiste Gilles Giguere (Lapointe) asked Prime Minister Pearson if the inquiry conducted by deputy chief electoral officer Nelson Castonguay would be public or in camera.

Pearson replied the decision likely would have to be made between Castonguay and Speaker Alan MacNaughton.

There the matter might have ended, but Liberal backbencher J. J. Greene (Renfrew South) asked Justice Minister Favreau if he would "consider conducting a judicial inquiry where these alleged frauds may be discussed publicly and under oath, rather than in camera as was envisaged in the type of private inquiry suggested by the leader of the NDP."

NDP leader Douglas immediately was on his feet accusing Greene of "seeking to impugn motives when he says I envisaged a private inquiry."

U.S. Sees No Threat From Russia

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. administration strategists saw nothing in Soviet Premier Kossygin's speech Friday to alter the Viet Nam war and went ahead with plans to step up the military campaign against the Communists.

The Soviet news agency Tass account of Kossygin's television report to the Russian people on his recent visit to North Viet Nam, China and North Korea was quickly scanned by Washington policy-makers. The reaction can be summed up this way:

The Soviet government chief generally held to the line already set forth by Moscow.

UNACCEPTABLE

His call for withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Viet Nam to pave the way for a peaceful settlement of the conflict is unacceptable to the U.S.

His warning of a spread of the conflict beyond present boundaries unless the U.S. halts its "aggressive actions" was also familiar propaganda.

Investigator Back Soon

Attorney-General Bonner said Friday the special investigator sent to Ottawa in connection with the "Dear Hal" letter is expected to return over the weekend.

The RCMP officer has completed his interviews with persons in Ottawa concerning the letter written to Hal Dornan, an aide to Prime Minister Pearson, over a signature purporting to be Premier Bennett's.

Mr. Bonner said legal experts here will study the investigator's findings at the beginning of next week.

That's the beauty of the Renault 4.
(Test drive it)

We broke the big rule with the Renault 4. We put all the money into its engineering. Not body design, or fancy trappings. We did this because a lot of people want stamina in a car, rather than status. This they get with the Renault 4. Its suspension is so good the car doesn't even need a road. The body is fully dipped against corrosion.

You get a powerful heater/defroster and instant cold weather starting. And you never have to grease the Renault 4. The Renault 4 gives up to 45 miles per gallon at 60 miles per hour. It carries four big people comfortably. Or two big people and 600 lbs. of what-have-you. So take your kids to school, go hunting, skiing — use it as a delivery van. The Renault 4 will do all this, on the highway or off, for years (many people have driven Renault 4s over 70,000 miles without even minor repairs). Now, what does this kind of performance cost you? $1,695. Renault 4.

Rockwell 'Harmful to Viewers'

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Karl Stern of Montreal, a psychiatrist, said Friday that television programs such as a CBC interview with American Nazi leader George Lincoln Rockwell are harmful to many TV viewers. Dr. Stern told the Commons external affairs committee, which is studying the problem of legislating against hate literature, that the Rockwell program and others like it could arouse latent hostilities in viewers. The Rockwell interview was shown last Oct. 25 on This Hour Has Seven Days. The worst thing about television was that big commercial interests paid psychiatrists to study the animal side of man's nature, Dr. Stern said. "They find out what man wants, not what he needs, and cater to it." This accounted for the large amount of time devoted to sex and violence.

Swiss to Oust 40,000

BERN (AP)—The Swiss government decreed Friday that five per cent of all foreign workers must leave the country by June 30. The decree, to reverse the influx of foreigners, will affect about 40,000 workers, mostly Italians, Germans, Austrians, Spaniards and Portuguese.

Girl Hit Policeman

A Calgary girl of 18 pleaded guilty Friday to charges of assault and wilful damage after she attacked a city policeman and smashed six windows at the police station. Patricia Clauson was placed in a strait-jacket in women's cells after breaking the windows. Const. M. J. Poulsen was questioning a male acquaintance of the girl Thursday evening when she hit him over the head with anti-hemophilic globulin and her purse, the policeman told city magistrate's court Friday. She was remanded to March 5 for sentence. The Canadian Red Cross supplies hospitals in Canada with whole blood and vital blood products such as gamma globulin, fibrinogen, serum albumin, and fresh-frozen plasma.

Shareholders Willing

VANCOUVER (CP) - Shareholders of Columbia Cellulose Co. Ltd. Friday approved a $20,000,000 share issue, most of it to help finance a new pulp mill near Prince Rupert.

The $20,000,000 of cumulative redeemable, convertible preferred stock will be issued with a par value of $25 a share.

Columbia's 60 per cent share in the equity financing of the mill will use up $15,000,000 and the rest will retire outstanding seven per cent preferred shares.

When all the shares are converted, Canadians will own more than 25 per cent of the company's stock, said Columbia president Paul Marshall.

Parent company is Celanese Corp. of America.

The $65,000,000 to $70,000,000 project, to be known as Skeena Kraft Limited, will be 40 per cent owned by Svenska.

Foulis Gets Two Years

Robert A. Foulis, former liquor executive and Shriner, was sentenced in assize court Friday to two years in prison on four fraud counts.

The Salt Spring Island man was found guilty Monday by a jury of defrauding four victims by inducing them to invest in nonexistent liquor deals.

Evidence at the trial showed Foulis sought the money to support his activities in the Shrine. In the last day of the trial, Crown counsel W. R. McIntyre said that as a result of the trial, Shillington of 3453 Quadra lost $11,000; Richard J. Girard of 1050 Laburnum lost $8,000; Ernest A. Benton, now of Vancouver, gained $4,400 and Dr. John Patterson of 3000 Lansdowne gained $14,751.

ENTIRE AMOUNTS

Larger amounts mentioned in the indictment covered the entire amounts the four men turned over to Foulis. The charges did not take into account the amounts repaid. Repaid or not — even at a profit — the loans were obtained fraudulently because there never was any liquor deal as Foulis claimed, said Mr. McIntyre.

ENTREPRENEUR COURT

Defence counsel Hugh McGovern, in a voice trembling with emotion, entreated the court to suspend sentence. He pleaded:

"This man was always a good man. He got involved. How this happened I don't know — I guess it was from being human. He is still respected by many, many people, in spite of this terrible involvement."

'WRECKED MAN'

"He is a wrecked man. He is sick. He has lost 60 pounds in weight during this terrible time."

"But he can still reclaim his life if Your Lordship would care to give him a chance."

"He has five children, the oldest a theology student and the youngest nine and 10 years old."

"They need their father."

CONFIRMS RIGHT

Crown counsel McIntyre confirmed the right of the court to suspend sentence and said prison would have no beneficial effect on Foulis.

But, he added, a suspended sentence would provide no element of deterrence to others.

Mr. Justice Wootton told Foulis he could be sentenced to as much as 10 years, but that the maximum penalty would not be invoked.

'DOESN'T BOTHER'

The judge said he had to consider Foulis' reformation in sentencing him.

"But it doesn't bother me very much," said the judge, referring to five influential character witnesses who told the court Friday they still have faith in Foulis' integrity and goodness.

'BELIEVED IN YOU'

"It was this belief in you that enabled you to perpetrate the crime. The people to whom you gave evidence believed in you — that is the essence of this crime."

He called the willingness of the dupes to enter the deals an extenuating circumstance.

Manslaughter

Moonie Sentenced To New Haven

A Saanich seaman found guilty of the fatal shooting of his father was sentenced Friday to a jail term of two years determinate and two years indeterminate.

Gary Allan Moonie, 21, of 170 Hartland, listened impassively as Chief Justice J. O. Wilson pronounced sentence.

He showed no emotion, except for an almost imperceptible shaking of his head as he left the courtroom.

A few feet behind him in the shallow public gallery of the second floor Supreme Courtroom women members of his family burst into tears.

Chief Justice Wilson told Moonie the maximum penalty for manslaughter is life imprisonment but it was not going to be imposed.

"But I would be derelict in my duty if I allowed you to escape unpunished," said the judge.

He told the prisoner the court found him "a little too full of self pity" and explained the sentence is to be served at Burnaby's New Haven institution.

Defence counsel Hugh McGovern said later Moonie will be eligible for parole if his behavior is satisfactory at the institution, designed for youthful first offenders.

CHARGE REDUCED

Moonie was tried for non-capital murder in the Nov. 28 fatal shooting of his 41-year-old bartender father, Allan Austin Moonie, at the family's Saanich home.

A 12-man jury found him guilty last week of the reduced charge of manslaughter. The jury recommended mercy.

TOLD TRUTH EARLIER

Said Chief Justice Wilson, "... you were not telling the truth when in the witness box you made the flimsy excuse of accident. But you were telling the truth earlier when your conscience was troubling you and you said you shot your father — wanting to hurt him."

Six People Injured In Traffic

Six people were injured in traffic accidents Friday afternoon and evening as poor visibility and wet streets combined.

Mrs. Agnes Clarke, 62, of 1918 Ash, was in fair condition in Jubilee Hospital after being thrown through a windshield in a three-car crash at Hillside and Gosworth.

Charles M. Gordon, 78, of 813 Perage, was in good condition in Veterans' Hospital with a back fractured in a two-car accident at Tillicum and Burnside.

U.S. Jet Hits Refuelling Plane

NEWINGTON, N.H. (AP)—A U.S. Air Force B-47 jet and a KC-135 jet tanker collided during a refuelling operation over the Atlantic Ocean Friday and were presumed down.

250 miles south of Newfoundland. The bomber customarily carries a crew of three men and the KC-135 tanker, four men.

Businessmen Scored

Tourism Cries for Help

QUALICUM — "The tourist industry has to come to some kind of an arrangement with municipalities or Chambers of Commerce if we are to survive," says president Walter Dodsworth of the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau. He spoke at the Bureau's second annual meeting Friday, where members accused island businessmen of failing to realize the importance of the industry.

Recreation department representative Richard Colby said a businessman doesn't have to see a tourist in his life to benefit from his dollars.

He was encouraged by increased municipal support for the Bureau and growing awareness of local governments to the value of the tourist dollar.

"but businessmen don't really appreciate what the tourist dollar is doing for them."

Mr. Colby urged Chambers to give support as fully to the tourist industry as they do to other industries.

Mr. Dodsworth suggested education as a remedy to the problem.

An Oak Bay resident, he was re-elected president.

Mayor Fred Bishop of Alberni asked for a study of the bureau's assessment system after it was learned some of the 11 island districts objected to assessments.

Municipal governments, Chambers and matching provincial grants finance the bureau.

Directors are Mayor Wilson, Victoria; Miss E. A. Packham,

Sooke-Jordan River-Port Renfrew; M. R. Eaton, Sidney; North and Central Saanich; Gerry Smith, Cowichan-Crofton; Duncan; John Cook, Nanaimo-Ladysmith; Mrs. Mary Backlund, Gulf Islands; Mrs. Mary Sutherland, Parksville-Qualicum; Les Hammer, Alberni Valley-West Coast; Mrs. Isobel Sandberg, Campbell River-north, and Don Cunliffe, Nanaimo, director at large.

The constitution was amended to allow a fourth appointed director, thereby creating a position for former executive director Alan McLean.

Bennett

Bi-&Bi Report Alarmist, Untrue

B.C. spokesman Friday branded the findings of the commission on bilingualism and biculturalism both alarmist and untrue.

Kanester Appeal March 19

Appeal of a rape conviction and 20 year sentence against Larry Kanester, 24, of Victoria is to be heard March 19 in Vancouver, said Kanester's lawyer D. E. Greenfield Friday.

Kanester was convicted in Victoria of the January 1964 rape of two University of Victoria co-eds and was sentenced to two consecutive 10-year penitentiary terms.

Mr. Greenfield's appeal of the rape convictions will be based on three main grounds.

They are:

● That a jury which tried both charges simultaneously could not help having one charge bias decision in the other.

● That evidence of the girls was not properly corroborated.

● That the judge erred in telling the jury that Kanester's identification was not in doubt.

Appeal of the rape sentence contends that since both charges were tried at once the 10-year terms should have been consecutive.

Premier Bennett disagreed strongly with the suggestion that Canada faces breakup unless there are major changes in public institutions and attitudes.

Canada, and especially B.C. has growing pains, said Mr. Bennett. But there are no problems that cannot be solved by goodwill and a little imagination.

The premier said the commission must have listened to the wrong people during its study of cultural relations in the nation.

Negative side

"All they listened to were the dissidents," he said. "It's like a person listening only to the negative side of a story. I'm sure they are wrong."

Attorney-General Bonner, who is bilingual, expressed similar views.

He said: "They have left untouched the great mass of public opinion in Canada that is not disturbed about the future of the country at all."

NOT UNIFYING

The conclusions reached by the commission are anything but unifying, said Mr. Bonner.

"I thought the mood of the country had settled down until the Bi and Bi people came in with these alarmist conclusions," he said.

Commenting on the commission's proposal not to bring in solutions to the crisis for two years, Mr. Bonner said:

"It seems like a carefully controlled emergency to me."

Garden Notes

'Veg' Lose Ground

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

At one time not so many years ago, the average seed catalogue would be devoted about two-thirds to vegetables and one-third to flowers. Nowadays the proportions are reversed, with one-third vegetable seeds to two-thirds ornamentals; in fact, in one popular international catalogue the proportion is even less, with only 21 out of 128 pages devoted to vegetables.

One reason for the decline in home vegetable plots is the modern trend to outdoor living—to converting the backyard into a recreation and entertainment area, complete with patio, barbecue and floodlights. There is no room for vegetables in such a set-up.

Another reason is the cleanliness and convenience of purchased vegetables—trimmed, scrubbed, packaged in plastic and all ready to go into the pot without any fuss or muss.

Against this, only too often, home-grown vegetables means a muddy sink, the odd earthworm or slug, and a garbage can overflowing with cabbage leaves and carrot tops. By the time this mess is cleaned up, supermarket vegetables begin to look pretty good, even if they may be a little short on vitamins and flavor as compared with freshly-picked home-grown stuff.

Quite a lot can be done to prevent all this mess, and it is quite possible to have fresh vegetables straight from the garden, with their full quota of vitamins, minerals and flavor, without dragging half the garden into the kitchen.

There is no need for any of that earth clinging to the roots ever to cross the kitchen threshold. Trim the tops and roots as you pull them and rinse them off under the garden tap. Or if you don't have a tap handy to the vegetable plot, carry a bucket of water with you.

The leek is notorious as a sink-stopper, bringing in gobs of mud and a lot of superfluous leaves. The best way to deal with this vegetable is to have a small pair of secateurs or round-nosed scissors with you, snipping off the roots and the top green leaves, then strip off the outer covering. A quick swish in the water bucket and your leeks are as clean and tempting as those from the supermarket.

To gather cauliflower—another messy vegetable—take along a sharp knife. Pull up the whole plant by the roots and carry it to that part of the garden where you operate your compost heap and incinerator. Slice off the root close under the cauliflower head and throw the root and stalk into the incinerator. Strip off the leaves and add them to the compost heap. Give the same treatment to cabbages, taking only the part which is wanted for cooking.

The stripped-off leaves of sprouts, cauliflower or cabbage should never be left lying on the ground in the vegetable plot itself, for these leaves give off a foul odor when rotting that can impart a taint to the standing vegetables.

It is always better to clean up all vegetables, especially the leafy ones, handy to the compost heap and incinerator, burning only the tough roots and stalks. This helps build up the compost heap, keeps the garden tidier—and the kitchen sink cleaner. A little soil scattered over the composted leaves will keep down the odor.

I make one exception to this rule of cleaning and stripping all vegetables away from the house. I never strip the husks off corn-on-the-cob until just before it is popped into boiling water. Corn deteriorates very rapidly after it is picked and, for full flavor, the protecting husks should remain on the cobs until the last moment.

Chinchillas Dying From Fluorides?

KELOWNA (CP)—Chinchillas, native to the high mountains of South America, are dying in the Kelowna area and fluoridated water has been blamed by breeders.

Dr. David A. Clarke, medical health officer for South Okanagan Health Unit, said Friday he is conducting "an exhaustive, scientific investigation."

Arthur Turner, NDP member for Vancouver East, said Thursday in the legislature he had received a letter from Kelowna breeders stating fluorides were killing the chinchillas.

Water has been fluoridated in the Kelowna area for several years.

Dr. Clarke said in an interview he has begun to check breeders throughout the province. One Kelowna breeder claimed that the mortality rate for his herd ranged between seven and 14 per cent before he began using fluoridated water eight years ago. Since then the rate had risen to between 15 and 75 per cent.

Another, said Dr. Clarke, had a mortality rate of from three to 28 per cent before fluoridation and now it ran between seven and 50 per cent.

"We must remember chinchillas are natives of areas in the high mountains, around 12,000 feet," the doctor said. "These breeders have made a complaint and as medical health officer I must do all I can to find out if it is valid."

Public Invited to See Police Display Skills

Victoria's police chief has invited the public to attend the second annual inspection of the 106-man force scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday in the Bay Street Armory.

Chief Constable John Gregory said demonstrations of police work will follow the full-dress inspection of the force by Atorney-General Bonner.

Mr. Bonner will also address the policemen and present a 20-year long service medal to Const. A. J. Wilson.

Inspector Brooke Douglas will comment during a series of events including:

● Demonstrations of judo and police holds.

● Precision motorcycle riding by the Vancouver City Police motorcycle drill team.

● A demonstration of police use of dogs for tracking criminals. This will feature civilian dogmaster George Barr and his German shepherd.

● A display by the Victoria Girls' drill team.

Music will be provided by a military band.

"It is an opportunity for the citizens to get a close look at their police force," said Chief Gregory.

Russia Whips Canada

MOSCOW (CP) — Russia trounced Canada 5-1 in a fast, hard-hitting hockey game played before a sellout crowd of about 12,000 at Lenin Stadium here Friday night.

Both teams are second-string to the teams that will represent the respective countries at the world championships in Tampere, Finland, March 4-14.

LAST STOP

Russia scored two goals in the first and third periods and one in the second. The Canadians, now completing a European tour that previously took them to Sweden and Finland, scored their lone goal in the first period.

The Russians outskated the Canadians, who appeared to have trouble getting their plays organized.

GOALIE SHINES

Goalie Don Collins of Winnipeg was brilliant for Canada. He is scheduled to play in the Tampere tournament.

Defenceman Tom Marshall of Winnipeg, who isn't scheduled to go to Tampere, scored Canada's goal, driving in a low shot from the blue line after taking a pass-back from forward Tom Rendall of Saskatoon Quakers.

OPENS SCORING

Yevgeny Mishakov paced the Russians with two goals, including the opening tally at 10:46 of the first period, which capped a beautiful passing play.

Other Russian scorers were Viktor Yakushev, Alexander Yakushev and Vladimir Brezhnev.

Canada received five penalties to Russia's three.

JOIN CLUB

Three or more of the Canadians are expected to join the national team in Tampere. Six of the Russians are expected to go to Tampere.

The Canadians play the Russians again here Sunday and in Leningrad Monday.

Bill Wakeham Scores 74 At Caracas

CARACAS (AP) — Victoria's Bill Wakeham shot a 74 yesterday to give him a 36-hole total of 154 at the halfway mark in the Caracas Open golf tournament, third stop on the Caribbean tour.

Wes Ellis of West Caldwell, N.J., fired a four-under-par 66 for 134 to turn into a two-stroke lead over Al Bessellink of Grossinger, N.Y.

Defending champion George Knudson of Toronto is tied with Art Wall of Pocono Manor, Pa., for seventh place with a par 140.

George Royal's Big Chance At Santa Anita Track Today

ARCADIA, Calif. — Eight horses, including B.C.-bred George Royal, race a mile and a quarter this afternoon for the major share of the $145,000 purse in the Santa Anita Handicap.

Most of the betting money will be on Gun Bow, the top impost as well. Gun Bow, who drew the rail, must carry 131 pounds. He spots George Royal 17 pounds.

Those named with weights, in order of post position, with jockeys in brackets, are:

Gun Bow (Yeatts) 131; Doc Jockey (Hartman) 133; Candy Spots (Shoemaker) 127; HM Rise (Pierce) 120; Or et Argent (Church) 114; George Royal (Longden) 114; Duel (Alvarez) 116; Mangayte (Pineda) 113.

Besides George Royal, a B.C.-owned horse, Or et Argent will get support. He is owned by Colin Campbell of Vancouver while George Royal is owned by Ernie Hammond and Bobby Hill.

George Royal was raised by Wilson Dunn and is trained by George Dunn. He has run some impressive races at Santa Anita this winter, some not as impressive.

Friday's results and odds:

Crusade Needed in City

By IAN ARROL

Last Sunday I went to the "rural" 100-member Anglican Church, St. David-by-the-Sea, 5188 Cordova Bay, and on Wednesday visited the minister, Rev. H. Gordon Walker. In the pews Sunday was promotion literature for both Pierre Berton's book The Comfortable Pew and Billy Graham's upcoming Crusade for Christ in Vancouver.

In the service itself the ancient liturgy of the church preceded and followed a sermon on computers and automation entitled Cybernation. The root word, cybernetics, was coined in 1945 as the title of a book on the science of control and communication.

The minister saw cybernation, not communism, as the significant revolutionary force in the world today.

"Russia is leaving communism behind, to cybernate. Communism is a means of dealing with society in a time of scarcity. With cybernation communism is no longer needed."

Mr. Walker sees the new competition among the nations of the world as one to see which nation can best adapt the new scientific revolution to the needs of its people.

The challenge for each nation is to make of cybernation, emancipation and not enslavement—man the master and not the slave of the machine.

"This demands on our part change-of attitudes, values, of the whole meaning of life."

"Cybernation offers a gift of freedom and an opportunity for a great growth of society."

With the machines producing the goods, Mr. Walker sees mankind's work as the producer of a new way of life, with the opportunity for each "to become the kind of person we would like to become deep down in our hearts."

He prayed "for courage and knowledge to change our attitudes and find greater values, to be the person Thou would have us be."

At his home Wednesday, Mr. Walker was asked about the relevance for him of the Pierre Berton and Billy Graham pamphlets side by side in the pews of his church.

Walker

"Such movements as Billy Graham's Crusades remind us of eternal truths kept alive in the Bible, the prayer and hymn books and the liturgy of the church. In addition some who feel threatened by the forces of growth and change within society, find the sense of security they need, in definite commitment and personal relations with their Creator."

"Such books as Pierre Berton's The Comfortable Pew ask us questions about the way in which the church today is applying these eternal truths in a changing society."

"If this means change, then the church must change if it is not to fade away with the passing age."

Change must take place on other fronts.

"The public schools have been dead, educating for an age that is past."

"Labor unions, if they are to continue as a progressive force within society, may, like the church have to change, not only their tactics, but their working philosophy."

In his own church, Mr. Walker would like to see the prayer book service become a more living experience for the people. He would like to have the altar in the middle of the church so people could gather round it, rather than have the vicar operate "from the stage."

Current issues should be discussed. "We will have adult discussion groups during Lent at which we will deal with all the pertinent matters brought up in Pierre Berton's book."

Concerning Mr. Berton's comments on the "sexual revolution," the clergyman said, "Unfortunately it seems to make light of indiscriminate sexual relations which by natural standards, can be evil."

"Promiscuity is against our natures. The natural thing is to mate."

Concerning Anglican refusal to marry those who have been divorced, Mr. Walker said, "We have avoided the problem of unhappy marriages by refusing to countenance divorce."

"Recently I was sorely tempted to break the canon law of the church by marrying a dear friend of mine, a widow, to a divorcee who had not seen her husband for a great number of years."

"However, I arranged for a United Church clergyman to conduct the marriage."

"I feel that this couple—both Anglicans—will feel that since the church refuses to minister to them at this time, they are rejected by the church."

Mr. Walker stressed, however, that in this world of change and rethinking about our traditional institutions, there are dangers we might deny or destroy the truth of God.

"I feel this city needs a Crusade. A changed person can help change the society in which he lives."

Promoted

Promoted to brigadier is Col. Peter Ramsay, former commander of 25 Militia Group, who retired when group was disbanded Dec. 31. He was made acting brigadier retroactive to Oct. 22, 1964, and was confirmed in rank of brigadier Friday by Canadian Forces headquarters in Ottawa.

Probe Begun

Pollution Law Rejected

Resources Minister Williston Friday rejected opposition appeals that legislation be introduced to control air pollution.

But he assured the House the government is looking into the problem.

FULL-SCALE PARLEY

Mr. Williston said the Canadian Council of Resource Ministers, of which he is chairman, is planning a full-scale conference on pollution this year.

Speaking on second reading of a bill amending the Pollution Control Act, Mr. Williston pointed out legislation covering air pollution in other areas has been "found wanting to the extreme."

LATEST EQUIPMENT

In reply to opposition criticism, Mr. Williston stressed all new pulp mills are required to install the latest equipment to control odor.

He outlined an experiment taking place at the Elk Falls pulp mill at Campbell River, which could lead to a "major breakthrough" in air pollution.

KNOWN IN MARCH

Outside the House, Mr. Williston said results of the $1,000,000 experiment should be known in March or April.

He said it is an attempt to control "the last of the elusive odor elements" the five per cent which so far has escaped.

SECOND READING

The legislature gave second reading to the bill which gives wider powers to the Pollution Control Board and transfers its control to the water rights branch from municipal affairs.

Both government backbenchers and opposition members urged the government to expand the bill to cover pollution of air and land as well as water.

Air pollution is considered a health hazard, a nuisance to local people, a detriment to tourism and a contributing factor in lowering property values.

Cadet Director

Former Royal Roads officer Capt. Robert Timbrell has been appointed director of officer cadets for three armed forces at Canadian Forces Headquarters, Ottawa. He has commanded aircraft carrier Bonaventure since August, 1963. Capt. Timbrell entered navy as a cadet in 1957, won Distinguished Service Cross at Dunkirk. He subsequently served in four Canadian destroyers, survived sinking of HMCS Margaree and was mentioned in dispatches for "services in destruction of submarine" while serving on HMCS Ottawa. He was first commanding officer of HMCS St. Laurent.

Lieutenant-governor snips tartan ribbon while mayor watches

'Jewel Box' of Theatre

Idle Years Dispelled
By Dramatic OpeningBy A. H. MURPHY
City Hall Reporter

When 850 people rose Friday night to sing The Queen and O Canada at the opening of McPherson Playhouse, there was a dramatic, almost painful, moment.

Ten years of dust, decay and disuse were forgotten as the old theatre took a new lease on life.

As Mayor Wilson rose to open the ceremonies one could almost see the ghostly figure of Premier Richard McBride standing on the same stage 50 years ago, almost to the week, and performing a similar ceremony to mark the opening of the Pantages.

Civic Enterprise

The impact of the theatre on the community, its social significance as a civic enterprise and importance as part of the city's massive beautification scheme, were all pointed out by speakers.

But these important facts were almost obscured by the aura of comfort, almost coziness, in which the small but ornate "opera house style" centre enfolded its patrons.

Variations on "a little jewel box" theme were heard as first-nighters, mostly in formal dress, assembled in the foyer before taking their seats.

Gay and Swish

It was all very gay and swish but still informal. There were people there from all branches of government, from the armed forces and from the arts and letters. The clergy was represented, as were the professions.

Mayor Wilson greeted the Lieutenant-Governor at the door. He and Mr. Pearkes were piped to the stage by Pipe Major Frank Knight and Sgt. George Purich.

"The great-heartedness and generosity of Thomas Shanks McPherson has made all this possible," Mayor Wilson said.

Mr. McPherson was asked once why he did not give away part of his estate while he lived and see some of his gifts being put to use.

His reply, Mayor Wilson said, was that he wished to keep control of the money while he lived in order to make it grow and thus have more to give away after his death.

More Leisure

The city's share of the McPherson estate, which also includes many charitable bequests, is worth $2,800,000, the mayor said. This is in addition to the gift of the theatre.

More than ever before a civic endeavor, such as the McPherson Playhouse, is of vital importance to the community, Mr. Pearkes said. This is because we are entering an era when people have more and more leisure.

Good theatre and the cultural influence of a theatre are vital.

"Take advantage of this good thing. Make it a real moving force in the community. It's your theatre. Use it," the Lieutenant-Governor challenged his audience.

Mr. Pearkes then cut the long, McPherson tartan ribbon which was lowered across the stage.

"I declare the McPherson Playhouse open," he said. Aside from the simple fact of its opening the theatre first night has another significance at city hall. It is the second unit in Centennial Square to become functional.

Progress Good

Ald. A. W. Toome, chairman of the Special Centennial Square Committee, pointed this out and added good progress is being made in the square as a whole.

The alderman extended the city's thanks to all those who had a part in the rejuvenation of the theatre, including architect Alan Hodgson and contractor R. A. Hall, who turned over the keys of the building to the alderman.

Ald. Robert Baird, chairman of the reception and entertainment committee, recalled he "trod the boards" in the Pantages in 1940 as a member of the Theatre Guild.

Dedication Prayer

"May no profane or evil influence be exercised in this theatre,"

This was part of the prayer of dedication given by Ven. Archbishop J. W. Forth, president of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

Mayor Wilson and Playhouse manager Robert Ellison were happy with the opening ceremonies.

"Things went off smoothly. This is such an important event culturally to the city and I believe the audience realized this."

Hectic Week

"I sensed a definite current of interest and sympathy and I am optimistic that the people of Victoria are going to take the playhouse to their hearts," the mayor said.

"It's been a hectic week," manager Ellison said.

"Things seemed to fall into place in the last few days, however, and although I'm tired, I am content."

It Was City's Big Night

Mingling, Applauding, Toasting

By GARY OAKES

It was Victoria's big night, and the people loved every delicious moment.

Eager first-nighters, they were lined up outside waiting for the doors to open at 7 o'clock and many lingered long after the final curtain a few hours later.

In between they mingled with dignitaries, applauded the performance and drank champagne toasts.

Black Ties, Furs

They were men in black ties and dinner jackets, women in furs and frills and umbrellas and checkroom girls dressed in tartan.

This, then, was official opening night for McPherson Playhouse—an opening which will long be cherished by nearly 850 people.

There were no chariots, but patrons were content to arrive by the traditional car.

Searchlights

Rented searchlights probed overcast skies as patrons arrived in chilly weather to be assisted by elaborately dressed doorman L. M. West, a veteran Empress Hotel doorman for 18 years.

Rain held back, but a nippy wind kept everyone moving quickly inside, while policemen guided long lines of cars waiting to unload passengers at the entrance.

Few women wore hats but many furs were visible along with several elaborate hair styles.

A few had corsages, but four girls from city hall gave out sprigs of heather complete with the McPherson tartan ribbon.

A staff of two ticket-takers, four cloakroom girls, two program sellers and eight ushers catered to the crowd.

Walking Sticks

There were beards and walking sticks and generous samplings of jewelry and scores of little mink which gave up their lives to dress up opening night.

People greeted friends, talked of culture and soaked up the tingling atmosphere.

Then a warning buzzer sounded three times, and they slipped quickly to their seats—quietly and with little crowding at entrances.

House manager Erik Perth, who has witnessed numerous opening nights, said he never saw anything run as smoothly as the McPherson opening.

"I hope audiences will always arrive this early in the future," he added.

First-nighters were also able to enjoy an exhibition of sculpture and painting by several Victoria-born artists.

A colorful sidelight was the Hugh Ross family—mother, father and son—all decked out in official Ross tartan.

And as the opening ceremonies began, only two chairs remained empty in the 837-seat theatre—those kept vacant in front of Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes for protocol.

In the checkroom, only seven hangers were left empty, and only because many women kept their furs. Then it was over, passed into history.

Opening night is gone, but not forgotten.

Opening Night 'Olive'

By IAN ARROL

As with olives, the Elsa Lancaster show was a delicious treat for some, unappetizing for others.

Elsa Friday night was not the Elsa most people know from her character roles in movies.

The role she played Friday night goes back even further than her motion picture career, or even her stage career—back to the days when she was a teen-age proprietor of a night club in London.

A number of the literary who came to the club or who knew her later contributed some verses for song or patter, including Sir Osbert Sitwell and Sir Allan Herbert.

As with most intimate reviews, much of the material Friday night dealt with the basic facts of life.

For those who found the material a bit too risqué, a murder sequence in which Elsa was both murderer and murdered came as a welcome relief.

It was also excellent drama with Elsa an aged woman in wheelchair and also her nursing sister, whose final ministrations was a knife plunged into the old lady.

Most joined in the fun of such "rhyming" as: "Her spaghetti made him forget he had a wife."

But not all were with Elsa when she told of the uses the three sisters called Faith, Hope and Charity made of their virtues—particularly the one called Charity.

Elsa's gowns were spectacular and often glamorous, as was she. She created a new mood for each sequence through the manipulation of her gowns and scarves and through her hair changes.

The hair changes were achieved by a flip of the hand and sometimes a quick knot.

The gown changes sometimes involved the gown she was wearing. For a Spanish mood, a cord in her costume was pulled and a floor-length red petticoat was partially revealed.

A bag of tricks containing hats and flowers and various brie-a-brac was positioned on the side of the piano (with glue, I imagine).

Pianist Ray Henderson was a good companion to Elsa and complemented her well with his mood setting and his own solos while Elsa went backstage for new costumes.

But Elsa's show would have been better as a one-night stand later in the season.

Opening night could begin to have been a show of more general appeal.

Something for everybody is not very exciting theatre as a steady diet, but for opening night it might well have been more appropriate to have had Lights Up on the whole spectrum of show business—a presentation that would have said: "This, this and this is show business."

Elsa Tasty for Some, Bitter for Others

Dogs Imitate Masters Think They're People

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Man's biggest inhumanity to dogs, letting the dog on the master into believing the dog is more a person than a canine.

When this happens—to the extreme—the dog in your house prefers people food to canine victuals, rolls in your bed instead of on the floor, expects to have his birthday gifts wrapped in birthday paper, and otherwise rules the household.

Bob Bartos, who claims to know dogs at least as well as he knows people, made these points in an interview.

The morals of wisdom are based on 40 years in dogdom. They're something every dog owner ought to chew on.

"Most dogs," Bartos said, "don't really know they're dogs. They think they are people and they expect to be treated like people."

True. A dog shows a lot of human traits. But take it from me, dogs ought to be treated like dogs.

Bartos, in connection with his job as manager of the Friskies Pet Foods Research Centre, has 150 dogs on a leash at one time—all kinds.

When he returns home from the kennels, he has six of his very own pets—two Scottish Terriers, a Kerry Blue, a Labrador Retriever, a Pekingese, and a Beagle.

"To treat your dog like a person, according to Bartos, is dishonest and taking the easy way out.

"A dog is the biggest con artist nature ever invented," he said. "Give him an inch and he'll take a mile. And then you have a pet you're hog-tied to."

To the extreme, Bartos maintains, dogs actually imitate their owners. A woman who is a compulsive eater, for example, probably has a dog who is a compulsive eater. Both, understandably, are overweight.

Every time the plump woman raids the refrigerator, her dog's right behind. She feels sorry for him. She feeds him.

A shy person, most likely, will have a shy dog. The master is afraid of too much social life and doesn't have much. The dog gets accustomed to living like a recluse. He reacts accordingly when faced with a lot of people.

Dogs of telephone addicts, meanwhile, take up the habit of hanging on the phone when the master isn't.

Bartos said some dogs, while the master is away, try to establish a link with the outside world by knocking the phone off the hook, listening to the buzz of the dial tone and getting hooked on it.

"Just treat your dog like a dog for the best results," Bartos said. This means feeding him regularly (most dogs like to eat at daybreak), giving him some affection, and most of all, being consistent with him.

Don't beat him one minute for something and then reward him for the same behavior later because you think it is cute.

Fat dogs, like fat people, need to have their calories cut, according to Bartos. The plump dog, he says, is more and more of a problem these days.

"Cut down the calories by shortening the quantity of food each day," he said. "Also try to see that the dog gets more exercise."

The prescription for a dog's long life, according to Bartos, goes like this:

Regular, at least once a year, checkups at the vet. Dogs get heart disease and cancer and other human ailments. Caught early, they're usually easier to control or contain.

Adequate exercise. See that the pet gets out at least once a day.

See that he is fed properly, at least once a day, and guard against overfeeding him.

Protect him from hazards—traffic and poison. Walk him on a leash. When you put weed killer on the lawn, don't let the dog lick it off.

Don't let him chew toys with lead-based paints on them. Dogs, like children, can suffer death from lead poisoning.

Don't use your cough medicines and other remedies on the dog. See a vet and get dog medicine when the pet is ill.

Entertain At Tea

Alpha Zeta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi entertained members of Perceptor Alpha Chapter at a tea in Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Guests were Miss R. Rodger, Mrs. W. A. Bowman, Miss Myrle Moyer, Miss V. Waller, Mrs. T. J. R. Waters, Miss L. Michaux, Miss D. Roberts, Mrs. G. L. Brown, Mrs. M. H. Alder-Smith, Miss K. Cameron, Mrs. G. M. Mackay, Miss D. Waller and Mrs. L. Wardman, all of Perceptor Alpha.

Also attending were Mrs. R. H. Lott, Mrs. R. Pettie, Mrs. D. MacDonald, Mrs. R. Aylward, Mrs. R. Higgins, Mrs. G. Higgins, Mrs. C. Mudrak, Miss R. Price, Mrs. W. A. Robertson and Mrs. L. Stillborn of Alpha Zeta chapter.

No kitchen needs to be dark, unattractive and inconvenient. A remodeling project can add working ease, often without costly structural changes. Here, now wood cabinets, counter tops, built-in oven, and surface units line up in an L-shaped arrangement on two walls. Arrangement is designed to bring top working ease. To keep work centres as close together as possible, refrigerator and serving peninsula were extended into the square-shaped room. All these changes were made without removing or moving a wall. Attractive wallpaper on the soffit continues in the shutter panels at window over planning desk. Light fixtures, recessed in soffit and ceiling and under the wall cabinets, provide shadow-free working conditions.—(Better Homes and Gardens)

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: How can a person overcome stage fright? I guess that's what you'll call it although it has nothing to do with the stage. When I have to recite in class—or worse yet if I must give a prepared talk—I perspire and shake all over.

I am 16 and in high school. Ever since I can remember I've had this trouble.

Yesterday the teacher called on me to answer a question. My heart began to pound so loud I was sure everyone in the room could hear it. My mouth felt like it was stuffed with cotton and my lips moved but no voice came. After what seemed like an hour, the teacher called on someone else.

I hate to think of going through life scared to death to open my mouth. Will you please tell me how to overcome this horrible fear?—MOUSEY.

Dear Mousey: First, know your material cold. If you are well-prepared and confident, you won't be such a nervous wreck when the teacher calls on you.

Next, practice speaking aloud at home, before the mirror. Get accustomed to the sound of your voice. Memorize and recite both prose and poems, and ask a member of your family or a friend to listen to you.

Third, force yourself to get on your feet and speak out. In time the fear will vanish. I know it can be done because I have done it.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm an 18-year-old who is going with a boy 19. We have both dated others but we prefer one another's company so we are now dating steadily, but not steadily.

Buddy and I have grown up in the same block. Our parents are friends and we go to the same church. I thought I knew all about Buddy but I learned by accident that he had dated a very cheap girl. I decided to speak to him about it. He said he was ashamed of himself and finally stammered, "A fellow has to have two girls—one he can be proud of and wants to marry, and one for sexual reasons."

Maybe I am simple-minded, but I don't get it. I've discussed this with some of my friends and was surprised to learn that they think Buddy is right. Is he?—RESPECTABLE.

Dear Respectable: Buddy has a low opinion of sex.

In our society, sex belongs in marriage. I hope Buddy gets his thinking squared away or he may turn out to be an alley-cat type husband—unable to find satisfaction with a respectable woman—his wife, that is.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been reading your column for years and have never seen my problem in print. I'm scared to death to be alone at night and I'm no kid, Ann. I've been married 10 years and have two children. My husband must travel in his work and he is out of town about one-third of the time. I'm just fine when the children are at home, but when they are away at summer camp, or visiting relatives, even for one night, I'm a nervous wreck. I toss and turn and imagine I see faces at the windows. The wind sounds like a human voice wailing and every shadow looks like a ghost. When morning comes I'm exhausted and can't do my housework.

Last evening was a triumphant one for the people of Victoria. It was the official opening of their proud new civic theatre, McPherson Playhouse, and the women in their attractive formal gowns and the men in evening attire added a special air to the gala occasion. Among the many guests gathered in the

Players Compete in Hat Show

By DOROTHY WROTONOWSKI

The hat show staged at the annual spring bridge luncheon at Colwood Golf Club had pretty stiff competition from the bridge players. It looked as if everyone had bought a new hat for the occasion.

Mrs. Leslie Macdonell had a dream of deep pink petals and as I had seen her the day before in champagne tulle, I asked her if she was going to keep this up all spring. Quick as a flash she told me that 1964 was a year of no hats and that she had bought two this season and I had seen them both.

Mrs. P. J. Shinnott was at the same table and her hat of white petals had a faint tinge of green here and there.

One of the most striking was worn by Mrs. John Wallace but then she always looks so smart. Her wide-brimmed black straw had a large black bow in front. Tiny beige, brown and orange flowers made the fitted cap Mrs. Stanley Moore chose. A peppy cockade of brown something or other sprouted atop.

Captain of the Gorge Vale Women's team, Mrs. E. F. MacMillan had on a hat of brilliant, green, flame and brown that you could see clear across the lounge.

A stitched, floral linen brim and crown of layered tulle in shades of blue was the choice of Mrs. Martin Cave; shiny black lace ribbon formed the pouf Mrs. Barley Humber wore and Mrs. Tom Christie's magenta pill box had matching feather trim. A black velvet and net whimsy was chosen by Mrs. G. M. Coxworth, black and white was the jaunty little hat worn by Miss Betty West, captain of the business girls' team and Mrs. Wesley Boyd had large beige roses on her beige rough straw.

Mrs. L. W. Davey, convener of the affair, was talking about what a good time they had at Harrison Hot Springs. Three other couples went with the party, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Clay, Mr. and Mrs. John Fleming and Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Heffernan. The occasion was to celebrate the birthdays of Lorne Davey and John Fleming.

About the only thing they did that was different was to go bowling.

Mona Fleming was so thankful the hat show had gone off so well. She was the convener of this part of the show and like all these things, no matter how smoothly they turn out, there is always a headache or two behind the scenes.

"I was on the phone for about three hours the night before and awake again at 4 a.m."

"As John left the house in the morning he said, 'Remember this is going to be a fun day. You are going to laugh at everything, no matter what happens.' I said I would."

"The tea towels I was to take out to the club I gave to John to put in my car. Then when I went out later loaded with hats I tried to put them on the front seat but they wouldn't fit in. I got another grip on them to lift them into the back and pulled the tea towels with them. The towels fell right into a large puddle." And that was the first time she had to laugh.

At the Veterans' coffee party the other day at the home of Dr. and Mrs. D. E. Alcorn on Lansdowne I couldn't help thinking how generous the Alcorns are about their beautiful home. I asked Doreen Alcorn how many times they had given their home for such parties but she couldn't remember off hand. No wonder. It was the fifth time for the Veterans' Auxiliary, but many other organizations and church groups have held parties in the Alcorn home.

TV TALK

By BRUCE LOWTHKE

TV NOTES: The First World War is nearly over. CBS will drop its Great War series in April, replacing it with Zoos. The CBS purchase of the San Diego zoo series marks the first time a U.S. network has bought a locally-produced show for national presentation.

The CBS ratings slip into a virtual tie with NBC and ABC has caused two big sponsors, Lever Bros. and General Foods, to cancel $15,000,000 worth of future CBS contracts and spread the loot around... Stan Freberg, whose TV and radio ads are refreshingly different, is branching into newspaper, magazine and billboard ads for movies. His first contract is the Stanley Kramer version of Katharine. Anne Porter's Ship of Fools. Walter Cronkite says the networks told last November how LBJ won, but not why. In 1968 they'll explain why votes went to who in every state, big city and maybe even every block.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

Do you ever hold up a winning card for no better reason than not knowing what to do if you win the trick? You should, for this is a maneuver that will often make life tough for declarer.

Playing the Big Club convention, you can describe a 19 or 20 point hand such as South's without going beyond the one-level: you simply open one club and rebid one trump, thereby showing a hand which was too strong to open one no trump. South duly reached the proper contract, but a clever play by East made him fight hard for nine tricks.

On the opening heart lead, dummy put up the king and East ducked. He figured there was no good return if he won, so he might as well sit back and wait. This was good defense for if he had taken the ace, the declarer would have romped home, since dummy's heart entry could not be attacked without setting up tricks for declarer in both majors. After East's duck, declarer had to try to create an entry to dummy in spades to reach the long clubs.

Declarer cashed the three top clubs. He figured that if he led the spade jack, the defense would let it hold and his goose would be cooked, for they could then win three spades and two hearts as soon as they got on lead. Instead of the spade jack, therefore, South played a low spade to dummy's nine. East had to release the ace and the hand was over, for now the queen was a sure entry to the board.

East's fine play to the first trick might have alerted West to the fact that communications were the key to the hand—and West might then have hit upon a device not often exploited outside expert circles. It cannot cost West anything to insert the ten when declarer leads the first round of spades; this is South stymied, for although West cannot stop him making a spade trick, West can keep him from making that trick in dummy. There is then no entry to the long clubs and declarer cannot garner nine tricks.

Man in Moccasins

Professor Tracing Dead Author

By DON GAIN

A University of Toronto professor is in Victoria looking for a man in moccasins.

The man in moccasins, Martin Allerdale Grainger, died in 1941, but his memory lingers on.

CHIEF FORESTER
He was chief forester of B.C. from 1916 to 1920 and is said to have had an important part in writing the Forest Act of 1912.

The professor is Dr. Rupert Schieder, who teaches English at Trinity College, U. of T.

AT ROYAL ROADS
From 1951 to 1958 he was head of the English department at Canadian Services College, Royal Roads.

Mr. Grainger became known in Canadian literary circles last year with the re-publication of his 1908 novel Woodsmen of the West, a story of B.C. loggers and logging.

WELL KNOWN HERE
He was well known in Victoria for years.
"I can remember seeing him walking down Government Street, heading for the government buildings," said Mrs. Margaret Postgate, 900 Park Boulevard. "He was a tall, picturesque figure. You just knew there was something special about him. Moccasins? Oh, yes, he always wore moccasins."

MANY REMEMBER
There are many more persons on Vancouver Island and the mainland who remember Mr. Grainger.

They are the ones through whom Dr. Schieder hopes to find Martin Allerdale Grainger. Already he has talked to friends, relatives and acquaintances in Duncan, Victoria, Vancouver, South Pender Island and White Rock.

He has journeyed to King's College, Cambridge, where Mr. Grainger is the subject of a fellowship to Trinity College, Toronto.

He has tracked him down in Knight Inlet and in the British Museum. He has talked to his London publisher. He has gone through thousands of newspapers and trade publications in Canadian libraries.

And now he is searching the B.C. Archives and the provincial library.

DURING RESEARCH
His quest began several years ago when doing research for the Literary History of Canada, he read hundreds of Canadian novels published between 1880 and 1920, most of them bad.

He struck literary pay dirt with Mr. Grainger's novel and was instrumental in getting it published by McClelland and Stewart in the New Canadian Library Series.

PLANS BIOGRAPHY
Dr. Schieder is on leave from Trinity College to work on a biography of this remarkable man. He will be going to England in about three weeks, still searching for information.

In the meantime, anyone who knew Martin Allerdale Grainger—cultured Englishman, logger, backpacker, South African War veteran, writer, forester—and has information to pass along, will find Dr. Schieder hard at work in the provincial library.

Dorion Probe

Pearson May Be Witness

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson may be called before the Dorion inquiry to explain testimony by RCMP Deputy Commissioner J. R. Lemieux that Mr. Pearson tipped his parliamentary secretary, Guy Rouleau, of RCMP plans to question Rouleau.

Deputy Commissioner Lemieux said RCMP Commissioner G. B. McClellan, scheduled to testify next week, told him this.

Chief Justice Frederic Dorion said the remark about Mr. Pearson is not evidence but rejected a motion that it be stricken from the record of his inquiry into allegations of attempted bribery and coercion by ministerial aides.

OUTSIDE HEARING

Commission counsel Andre Desjardins said outside the hearing he now will have to discuss with Chief Justice Dorion whether to add the prime minister's name to the witness list.

One suggestion that Mr. Pearson may be summoned has already been made during the inquiry.

DATES AT ISSUE

Ross Drouin, Conservative party counsel, said previously he may ask to question Mr. Pearson about a Dec. 16 letter from the prime minister saying he knew about the bribery allegation last Sept. 2, not Nov. 22 as he had earlier told the Commons.

Mr. Rouleau was questioned by the RCMP last Sept. 17. Mr. Pearson told the Commons Nov. 24, when Mr. Rouleau resigned as his parliamentary secretary, that Mr. Rouleau did not inform him until that morning about his part in the case.

Mr. Rouleau told the Commons he asked Mr. Pearson to relieve him, but had done nothing wrong in making representations in the case of Lucien Rivard.

Rivard was arrested in Montreal.

Prime Minister Not Told—Favreau

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Favreau said Friday night Prime Minister Pearson was not informed beforehand of the RCMP's intention to question his parliamentary secretary, Guy Rouleau, about the Rivard case.

Mr. Favreau, in a statement issued through the prime minister's office, said that Mr. Pearson first spoke to Mr. Rouleau about the matter on Nov. 24—the day he accepted Mr. Rouleau's resignation as parliamentary secretary.

The statement was issued several hours after RCMP Deputy Commissioner J. R. Lemieux told the Dorion inquiry he was told that the prime minister advised Mr. Rouleau last summer that he was to be questioned by the RCMP.

He also said he thought Mr. Pearson had been advised by

'Just Begun to Fight'

Jones Comes Out Swinging At Legislative Dismissal Bill

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Reporter

A bill introduced in the legislature to fire G. E. P. Jones as B.C. purchasing chairman was described by him Friday as instant execution of the innocent.

He called the government's action Thursday incredible and appalling, and said he would not accept the proposed move without a fight.

15 MONTHS' PAY

"In the words of John Paul Jones, I have only just begun to fight," he said.

The bill would give Mr. Jones 15 months' pay dating back to October when he was suspended as chairman of the purchasing commission. He would receive a net $12,057 and qualify for a 10-year civil-service pension.

ACQUITTED JAN. 15

Mr. Jones was acquitted Jan. 15 on two charges of receiving favors from a car dealer while a government official.

He has not been reinstated, and the crown has appealed the verdict of Judge Montague L. Tyrwhitt-Drake.

D. A. Thompson of Vancouver, counsel for Mr. Jones, launched two court actions this week in the case.

APPEAL ATTACK

He will ask the B.C. appeal court Monday to throw out the crown's appeal in the case.

And on Wednesday, provincial comptroller-general C. J. Ferber must appear in B.C. Supreme Court to show cause why the government should not be ordered to pay Mr. Jones five months' back salary.

Asian Flu Hits Eastern States

GENEVA (Reuters)—Influenza is spreading in the eastern half of the United States, parts of Russia and in Finland, the World Health Organization reported Friday.

The organization said strains of the A-2 virus, commonly known as "Asian flu," have been identified in seven eastern U.S. states.

"Notwithstanding this, news reports have given circulation to those parts of the deputy commissioner's testimony. In these circumstances, the minister of justice issues this statement:

"The prime minister was not informed beforehand of the intention of the RCMP to question his parliamentary secretary, Mr. Guy Rouleau. He first spoke to Mr. Rouleau about the matter on Nov. 24, the date on which he accepted Mr. Rouleau's resignation as his parliamentary secretary."

Author Says:

Old Jail Not Fit For Pigs

QUEBEC (CP)—Montreal author Jacques Hebert, 41, out on bail after three days in Quebec's century-old provincial jail, said conditions are so revolting there that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would protest if pigs were lodged in the institution.

The author was freed on $1,000 cash bail pending his appeal on a conviction for contempt of court.

Mr. Hebert was fined $3,000 Tuesday and sent to jail for 30 days as a result of passages in his book I Accuse the Assassins of Cofin.

At the mass meeting in Selma, Bevel called Jackson "a man who had a down payment on freedom," and said Negroes should be prepared to walk to Montgomery or go to jail trying to get there.

TO GRAND JURY

McLeod said he would turn the statement over to the county grand jury.

Jackson's funeral was set for Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the Zion Church in Marion. King was expected to deliver the eulogy.

At the mass meeting in Selma, Bevel called Jackson "a man who had a down payment on freedom," and said Negroes should be prepared to walk to Montgomery or go to jail trying to get there.

DEMONSTRATION SET

A demonstration already has been set for Montgomery March 8.

Bevel told reporters after his fiery speech that he was testing to see if enthusiasm could be whipped up for a two or three-day march to Montgomery.

Propane Truck Blows Up

Blocks in Ruins

AYLMER, Ont. (CP)—At least a third of this southwestern Ontario town's business section was wiped out Friday when a tanker truck laden with propane gas exploded in a main intersection.

The blaze roared out of control for close to three hours, wiping out about 15 businesses.

Early estimates assessed damage at $1,000,000.

The tanker truck, driven by Elmer Humphries, was having difficulty gaining traction after stopping at the intersection.

A service truck driven by Al Parker gave it a nudge to get it started.

At this point, a valve on the back of the propane truck broke and propane gas gushed out filling the area with fume followed by a major explosion and a succession of smaller ones.

Parker was treated for hand burns, but his condition was not serious.

BLACK BELT UP IN ARMS

SELMA, Ala. (UPI)—Jimmy Lee Jackson, a young Negro with "a down payment on freedom" who was shot in a melee with state police last week, died of his wounds Friday.

His death prompted a Negro leader to propose a 50-mile march from Selma to Montgomery to demonstrate before the capitol.

"If we don't march and straighten out Alabama," the Rev. James Bevel told a mass meeting, "the blood of men like Jimmy Jackson will be on our hands."

News of Jackson's death created more tension in this state's seething black belt, target of Dr. Martin Luther King's massive voter registration drive.

HAS STATEMENT

At nearby Marion, where Jackson was shot, circuit solicitor Blanchard McLeod announced he has a statement from the man who shot the 26-year-old Negro.

But he would not say whether the person is a state trooper.

Jackson, before he died, said state troopers shot him and clubbed him when he tried to protect his mother during violence in Marion last Thursday night.

TO GRAND JURY

McLeod said he would turn the statement over to the county grand jury.

Jackson's funeral was set for Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the Zion Church in Marion. King was expected to deliver the eulogy.

At the mass meeting in Selma, Bevel called Jackson "a man who had a down payment on freedom," and said Negroes should be prepared to walk to Montgomery or go to jail trying to get there.

DEMONSTRATION SET

A demonstration already has been set for Montgomery March 8.

Bevel told reporters after his fiery speech that he was testing to see if enthusiasm could be whipped up for a two or three-day march to Montgomery.

Muhammed

Muslim Held For Murder

NEW YORK (AP)—The first direct police link-up of the Black Muslims to the assassination of Malcolm X came Friday, with the arrest of a husky Negro member of the militant anti-white sect. Held without bail on a homicide charge, he was the second man accused in the slaying.

Since Malcolm, 39, was shot down Sunday, police have worked on the theory that his bitter 1963 break with Elijah Muhammad's Chicago-based Black Muslims lay behind the slaying. Muhammad has denied any complicity.

Early Friday police arrested Norman 3X Butler, 26, a reported member of Muhammad's elite guard of discipline enforcers.

Free on bond, Norman 3X was accused last month of taking a shot at another defector from the Black Muslim ranks.

Norman 3X was charged with "acting in concert" in Malcolm's slaying with Talmadge Hayer, 22, who was arrested immediately after the assassination.

'Enemies Want My Life'

CHICAGO (UPI)—Black Muslim leader Elijah Muhammad, speaking behind a solid phalanx of karate-trained bodyguards told his followers Friday that his enemies are "out to kill me." He exhorted the Muslims to "protect yourselves."

Muhammad castigated Black Nationalist leader Malcolm X, a defector from the Muslim hierarchy who was slain in New York last Sunday, as an enemy who "criticized, criticized, criticized" and got what he preached.

The 67-year-old, self-styled "messenger of Allah" speaking at the first session of a three-day convention, vowed that he would not let anybody "destroy" the black supremacy sect.

"If the police can't put a stop to it, we can put a stop to it," he told the cheering faithful.

The only trouble came when Muslim minister Louis X of Boston shouted "we have a traitor in our midst" and pointed to Ben Holman, a Negro reporter for the Columbia Broadcasting System who once posed as a Muslim while working for the Chicago Daily News. Holman was hustled out of the building.

The Establishments

By RON POULTON
(Third in a series)

If you want to find the real Canadian titans of finance, pick the daisies in the corporate field by studying some of the 15,500-000 books in Canada's libraries and the directorships of a few dozen companies.

Then, struggle to the top of a pyramid of government statistics which disclose that since 1951 the number of privately-owned companies, partnerships and co-ops has been steadily dropping while the number of incorporated companies has been steadily increasing.

Incorporated companies employ more than 95 per cent of the workers in rubber, paper, primary metals, transportation, electrical equipment, tobacco products, machinery, chemicals, petroleum and coal products, textiles and knitting mills, and metal fabricating.

With 32.9 per cent of the labor force in manufacturing, few Canadians stray far from the corporate influence even if they never know who owns what.

The view from the pyramid is too hazy to spot the Titans of Finance in order of riches.

Private companies, like the mercantile empire presided over by 55-year-old John David Eaton, do not, for instance, have to issue financial statements publicly. And while it is known that the T. Eaton Co. is the largest single employer next to the CNR and the government itself, the rest is speculation.

Foreign investment — three-quarters of it American money and tripled since the Second World War — also contributes to the haze. American money probably controls more than 5,000 so-called Canadian businesses.

The haze thickens even more because government regulations are deliberately designed to keep vital information between the titan and the tax man, and away from the inquisitive public.

Courtenay Case

Two Cheques Two Months

COURTENAY — A 48-year-old man was sentenced in magistrate's court Friday to a total of two months in jail after he pleaded guilty to two counts of false pretences.

Court was told Ross Myers passed two phony $25 cheques at the Courtenay Hotel last July. He had three previous similar convictions.

'DISTRICT FLAGGED'

"This is a serious offence," said Magistrate John Ryland. "The Courtenay district is plagued with this matter."

Earlier, Frederick Gordon Kerton, 18, was remanded in custody to Monday for sentence after pleading guilty to assault and being a minor in licensed premises.

Testimony was that Kerton and a companion drank several glasses of beer at the Riverside beer-parlor, then left after being asked for identification cards.

Kerton's father, who asked permission to address the court, said his son planned to go home but his companion knew a girl in town and the two went to Ralph Kenny's home.

Evidence indicated a young boy at the Kenny home let the two in and they went to the bedroom of Mr. Kenny's daughter, whose cries brought her father.

Mr. Kenny asked Kerton three times to leave. A shoving match ensued and Mr. Kenny received a sprained neck.

Mr. Kerton said his son went back to the Kenny home next day and apologized. He quoted Mr. Kenny as saying he didn't think young Kerton intended to hurt him.

Chamber Votes Confidence

COURTENAY — The Chamber of Commerce has given David Kirk and his airport committee a vote of confidence.

The vote came after Mr. Kirk said he and his committee members are prepared to resign, if necessary, over differences of opinion with city council on completion of the airport. He also said council has a new airport representative and co-operation is slightly less than before.

Chamber members learned city council and the Chamber have agreed, the Chamber will handle all city publicity and in return the city will give the Chamber extra consideration in the budget.

A motion to hold Chamber meetings in the evening was defeated.

Nanaimo Appeal Names 11

Retiring president Dr. M. G. Zorlein said the 17 member-agencies will receive 100 per cent of their needs. The appeal was $2,000 short of its $39,332 goal but that was made up by investment income.

The directors will elect a new president and executive within two weeks.

Lake Cowichan

SPCA Replies To Criticism

DUNCAN — Miss Mary Waldon, president of the Cowichan SPCA, fired back Friday at Lake Cowichan village officials over a statement made about the village's dog problem.

Village council chairman Mrs. Mildred Child was quoted earlier this week as saying the SPCA branch had declined to include Cowichan Lake in its territory because it has enough work in the Duncan area.

Since then, she said, the SPCA has received many complaints about stray dogs in the Cowichan Lake area. Officials went to see the village council about a year ago.

"We took the trouble to go up there," she said, "but we were treated brusquely and Mrs. Child told us 'we (Lake Cowichan) have no dog problem'."

CHASING CATTLE

Miss Waldon pointed to a columnist story Thursday which quoted village officials as saying dogs were chasing cattle, destroying property and making a nuisance of themselves.

Miss Waldon said the SPCA goes to the Cowichan Lake area only to investigate cases of cruelty to animals.

She suggested a stiff licence fee and enforcement, a pound with local poundkeeper and occasional shipment of unclaimed animals to the Duncan shelter for destruction.

Miss Waldon said Lake Cowichan would have to contribute to the SPCA operation as do the city and municipality.

ALMOST HAUNTING

Beryl Regier played Eliza with warmth and delicacy, never coming out of character and never overplaying. Her voice, while not too strong, was sweet and almost haunting.

Peter McMahon did an outstanding job as Prof. Henry Higgins. His voice is strong and he carried the role with ease.

Other supporting roles played by Ray Logan, Lloyd Hawley, Dorothy Logan and Lillian Whitehead added to the excellent effect. Musical accompanist was Ann McMahon, choreographer was Joy Woodrow and Ann Vesterback directed much of the costuming.

Sea Collision Kills Cook

Thomas Drossa of Vancouver, a cook aboard the oil tanker Tyee Sheli, was crushed to death while sleeping in his bunk early Friday when the tanker collided with an Island Tug and Barge vessel in Quatsino Sound.

Reports indicate the tanker and barge Island Express, being towed by the tug Island Commander, collided in darkness. Mr. Drossa, a father of three, joined the ship Feb. 13. Damage to tanker and barge was not extensive.

Cowichan District

Five Bids for Hospital

DUNCAN—Five bids on the long-awaited $3,500,000 Cowichan district hospital, all from Vancouver firms, were opened Friday by the hospital board in a closed meeting.

Board chairman Claude Green said BCHHS "advised us not to release any figures at this time because of the complexity of the bids."

Mr. Green said details would be announced next week and named the firms as Smith Bros. and Wilson, Commonwealth Construction, Laing Construction and Equipment, Burns and Dutton Construction, and Dawson and Hall.

He said a recommendation will go to Health Minister Martin soon as the board hopes for his approval of one of the bids before the end of March.

Tourism Crying For Co-operation

QUALICUM — "The tourist industry has to come to some kind of an arrangement with municipalities or Chambers of Commerce if we are to survive," says president Walter Dodsworth of the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau.

He spoke at the Bureau's second annual meeting Friday, where members accused island businessmen of failing to realize the importance of the industry.

Recreation department representative Richard Colby said a businessman doesn't have to see a tourist in his life to benefit from his dollars.

He was encouraged by increased municipal support for the Bureau and growing awareness of local governments to the value of the tourist dollar "but businessmen don't really appreciate what the tourist dollar is doing for them."

Mr. Colby urged Chambers to give support as fully to the tourist industry as they do to other industries.

Mr. Dodsworth suggested education as a remedy to the problem.

An Oak Bay resident, he was re-elected president.

Mayor Fred Bishop of Alberni asked for a study of the bureau's assessment system after it was learned some of the 11 island districts objected to assessments.

Municipal governments, Chambers and matching provincial grants finance the bureau.

Directors are Mayor Wilson, Victoria; Miss E. A. Packham,

Sooke-Jordan River-Port Renfrew; M. R. Eaton, Sidney, North and Central Saanich; Gerry Smith, Cowichan-Crofton-Duncan; John Cook, Nanaimo-Ladysmith; Mrs. Mary Backlund, Gulf Islands; Mrs. Mary Sutherland, Parksville-Qualicum; Les Hammer, Alberni Valley-West Coast; Mrs. Isabel Sandberg, Campbell River-north, and Don Cunliffe, Nanaimo, director at large.

The constitution was amended to allow a fourth appointed director, thereby creating a position for former executive director Alan McLean.

Confusion at Cowichan Bay

Labor Dispute Delays CNR Dock Expansion

COWICHAN BAY — Confusion surrounds the cause of a labor dispute which is said to have stopped some of the work on the CNR wharf expansion project here.

A picket line was set up Thursday morning at the wharf by members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union.

BUSINESS AGENT

ILWU spokesman G. W. Ball, business agent for the Victoria local, said Friday the CNR violated an agreement signed in November, 1963, which gave the ILWU all warehouse work in the CNR assembly area.

He said the CNR subcontracted the work and claimed no jurisdiction dispute is involved.

SEEK INJUNCTION?

However, CNR officials indicated they feel the problem is a jurisdictional one, between the ILWU and the teamsters. They also hinted the CNR may ask a court in Vancouver for an injunction against the picketing.

Mr. Ball said Ideal Fuel Co. drivers, who are teamsters, are hauling lumber into the assembly area through Western Lumber Carriers Co.

AS FAR AS KNOWN

He added: "We expect them not to cross the picket line and, as far as I know, no union man has crossed."

The picket line reportedly has been honored by Victoria building a power line and pile drivers building extended CNR bridge and building berth facilities. Hume and Rumble electrical workers are working in the assembly area.

Nanaimo Hospital

New-Unit Policy Best for Ailing

NANAIMO—The Nanaimo hospital board feels any new hospital unit "should be adjacent to and form part of the present hospital," says president William Frith, said medical and surgical beds, even with the addition of 28, "are still shockingly overcrowded" and this situation shows "the urgent need" for the addition of even more of these beds.

He told the annual meeting Thursday of the Regional General Hospital Society this move would be more "in the interest of patient care."

ARCHITECTS WORKING

Mr. Frith said the demand on capital to provide equipment to keep up with medical science is being taxed.

"MAKE DONATIONS"

"It is essential that some of the organizations and individuals in our community make donations to the hospital to finance this equipment," he said.

Mr. Frith said the 1964 payroll for about 270 employees was $1,064,544 and finance chairman F. H. Rowbottom reported a deficit of $22,882 in a total operating budget of $1,430,000.

The cost of equipment needed this year was set at $39,135.

Liquor Deals

Foulis: Two Years

Robert A. Foulis, former liquor executive and Shriner, was sentenced in assize court Friday to two years in prison on four fraud counts.

The Salt Spring Island man was found guilty Monday by a jury of defrauding four Victoria men by inducing them to invest in nonexistent liquor deals.

TO SUPPORT

Evidence at the trial showed Foulis sought the money to support his activities in the Shrine.

In the last day of the trial, Crown counsel W. R. McIntyre said that as a result of the deals:

Ivan Shillington of 3453 Quadra lost $11,000; Richard J. Girard of 1050 Laburnum lost $8,000; Ernest A. Benton, now of Vancouver, gained $4,400 and Dr. John Patterson of 3000 Lansdowne gained $14,751.

ENTIRE AMOUNTS

Larger amounts mentioned in the indictment covered the entire amounts the four men turned over to Foulis. The charges did not take into account the amounts repaid.

Repaid or not — even at a profit — the loans were obtained fraudulently because there never was any liquor deal as Foulis claimed, said Mr. McIntyre.

ENTREPRENEUR COURT

Defence counsel Hugh McGovern, in a voice trembling with emotion, entreated the court to suspend sentence. He pleaded:

"This man was always a good man. He got involved. How this happened I don't know—I guess it was from being human."

"He is still respected by many, many people, in spite of this terrible involvement."

"WRECKED MAN"

"He is a wrecked man. He is sick. He has lost 60 pounds in weight during this terrible thing."

"But he can still reclaim his life if Your Lordship would care to give him a chance."

CONFIRMS RIGHT

Crown counsel McIntyre confirmed the right of the court to suspend sentence and said prison would have no beneficial effect on Foulis.

But, he added, a suspended sentence would provide no element of deterrent to others.

Mr. Justice Wootton told Foulis he could be sentenced to as much as 10 years, but that the maximum penalty would not be invoked.

"DOESN'T BOTHER"

The judge said he had to consider Foulis' reformation in sentencing him.

"But it doesn't bother me very much," said the judge, referring to five influential character witnesses who told the court Friday they still have faith in Foulis' integrity and goodness.

"BELIEVED IN YOU"

"It was this belief in you that enabled you to perpetrate the crime. The people who gave evidence believed in you—that is the essence of this crime."

He called the willingness of the dupes to enter the deals an extenuating circumstance.

Cowichan

Exhibition Tour Sunday

DUNCAN — Quick action has been taken on the proposal that the Cowichan Exhibition board and other groups investigate purchase of an 84-acre farm as the future home of the Exhibition.

Officials said Friday members of the Exhibition board, Cowichan Agricultural Society, city of Duncan and municipality of North Cowichan will tour the Chapman farm on Lakes Road Sunday afternoon.

IN FIVE YEARS

Exhibition board president Miss Mary Walden disclosed earlier this week the farm was available for $85,000 but might cost $185,000 in five years when the fair will be too big for its present 13 acres.

Mayor Jack Dobson of Duncan said Friday the proposal is "good thinking" if the present grounds are inadequate.

COULD ARRANGE

He said city policy has always been to buy land rather than invest in buildings and added the city could arrange ownership of outside property. The farm is in North Cowichan.

Reeve Donald Morton of North Cowichan said the Exhibition "has been successful on the present site and any move should be approached with caution."

Nanaimo

Boy, 16 Sent To Jail

NANAIMO—A 16-year-old boy who appeared in adult court Friday on eight break-in charges was sentenced by Magistrate Eric Winch to a total of one year definite and one year indeterminate.

Ronald Gale Miller, 11 Victoria Road, pleaded guilty. The magistrate recommended a term in the Haney correctional institute.

Police said the offences took place between December, 1963, and Feb. 11, 1965, and involved two coin laundries, two general stores, two garages and a sign company.

BUTCHER KNIFE

Stephen Tomma, 23, of Kamloops, who told police the foot-long butcher knife he carried in his waistband was "for my enemies," was jailed two months for public intoxication.

Tomma was sentenced Thursday to one day in jail on a similar charge and Magistrate Winch told a class of boys visiting the court he believed in giving a person a chance. But if Tomma returned, he would get 14 to 30 days.

Court was told Friday Tomma brandished the knife in an all-night cafe. The magistrate said he was "giving you 30 days for the drunkenness and 30 days for the butcher knife."

Election Surprises Climax Year For Port Hospital

PORT ALBERNI—A stormy year for West Coast General Hospital ended Thursday night with an annual hospital society meeting which saw four incumbents lose their seats on the hospital board.

Among the losers was W. J. C. Jones, longtime member and chairman.

William Ginniver of the Legion and Maurice Landry of the IWA were re-elected and new members are Byron Greenwood, pulp, sulphite and paper workers; David Smith, Lions; Andrew Paul, paper-makers; and George Cole, school employees union.

OTHERS NAMED

New member-organizations in send delegates included the school union, longshore union and teachers' association.

Outside representatives are Ald. C. M. Blair, Alberni; Ald. James Macfie, Port Alberni; Mrs. Nelson Collier, women's auxiliary, and T. V. Boag, timber industry. M. E. B. McVicar has a year to go as provincial representative.

The meeting came after a year filled with controversy over changes at the hospital and formation of a hospital district.

The changes, approved by the provincial health department after long negotiations and a citizens' petition, include a chronic care unit and use of the top floor as a pediatric department.

Secretary-administrator Harvey Taylor told the meeting sketch plans for the chronic care unit are expected within a month. A "homelike" atmosphere is planned in the wing, which may be built while the changes are taking place.

NEW HALF SHARE

Ald. Blair said B.C.'s new half share of construction costs for such units will mean less money is needed from the Twin Cities and the proposed district.

He said a meeting of representative citizens from all rural areas outside the Twin Cities, as far down Alberni Inlet as Bamfield and Effingham Sound, will be called early in March.

Ald. Blair said the district must be organized quickly to avoid delays in construction after plans and estimates are in.

Mr. Landry said the firm of Gardiner, Thornton, Gathe and Associates will be the architects and the bed total will be planned at 136 instead of 111 in earlier plans.

Mr. Taylor outlined major changes:

- Expansion of the main-floor X-ray department.
- Enlargement of basement quarters to provide change rooms for the increased staff.
- Conversion of the present pediatric floor into medical and isolation wards and a two-room detention unit.
- A solarium at the end of each corridor.
- Expansion of the laundry and record storage department.

Finance chairman Robert Scofield said the hospital's cash position has improved "considerably" to a bank credit of $14,064 and no loans outstanding. A year ago, the credit was $268 and there was a $2,500 bank loan.

Mr. Jones said operation of a hospital-based ambulance might cost $14,000 to $15,000 a year.

Comox Valley Aspires as Cultural Centre

COURTENAY—First steps will be taken soon to investigate a proposal which could make the Comox Valley the cultural centre of Vancouver Island.

The idea, a summer school of the arts and crafts in Courtenay, is the brainchild of Harry Harris, former city alderman and now head of the Courtenay school district's adult-education program.

Participants in a recent private meeting on the summer school idea agreed to get in touch with an expert in the field. He or she will lead an evening of discussion and planning, time and place to be announced later.

The meeting agreed to create the school on the pattern of a successful operation conducted annually in the Okanagan since 1961. Speakers felt that, if the Interior can run such a school successfully:

"We can do it here."

They also conceded creation of the school will call for a great deal of groundwork, organization and public support.

The Okanagan school has short and detailed courses in many fields and boasts such instructors as author W. O. Mitchell, singer Jan Rubes and critic Lester Sinclair.

Courses include bands, string ensemble, recorders, piano, theory, musical discussion, musical master studies, drama for children and adults, French language, creative writing, broadcasting, pottery, films, sculpture and painting.

Dorion Probe

Pearson May Be Witness

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson may be called before the Dorion inquiry to explain testimony by RCMP Deputy Commissioner J. R. Lemieux that Mr. Pearson tipped his parliamentary secretary, Guy Rouleau, of RCMP plans to question Rouleau.

Deputy Commissioner Lemieux said RCMP Commissioner G. B. McClellan, scheduled to testify next week, told him this.

OUTSIDE HEARING

Chief Justice Frederic Dorion said the remark about Mr. Pearson is not evidence but rejected a motion that it be stricken from the record of his inquiry into allegations of attempted bribery and coercion by ministerial aides.

Commissioner counsel Andre Desjardins said outside the hearing he now will have to discuss with Chief Justice Dorion whether to add the prime minister's name to the witness list.

One suggestion that Mr. Pearson may be summoned has already been made during the inquiry.

DATES AT ISSUE

Ross Drouin, Conservative party counsel, said previously he may ask to question Mr. Pearson about a Dec. 16 letter from the prime minister saying he knew about the bribery allegation last Sept. 2, not Nov. 24, as he had earlier told the Commons.

Mr. Rouleau was questioned by the RCMP last Sept. 17. Mr. Pearson told the Commons Nov. 24, when Mr. Rouleau resigned as his parliamentary secretary, that Mr. Rouleau did not inform him until that morning about his part in the case.

Mr. Rouleau told the Commons he asked Mr. Pearson to relieve him but had done nothing wrong in making representations in the case of Lucien Rivard.

Prime Minister Not Told—Favreau

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Favreau said Friday night Prime Minister Pearson was not informed beforehand of the RCMP's intention to question his parliamentary secretary, Guy Rouleau, about the Rivard case.

Mr. Favreau, in a statement issued through the prime minister's office, said that Mr. Pearson first spoke to Mr. Rouleau about the matter on Nov. 24, the day he accepted Mr. Rouleau's resignation as parliamentary secretary.

The statement was issued several hours after RCMP Deputy Commissioner J. R. Lemieux told the Dorion inquiry he was told that the prime minister advised Mr. Rouleau last summer that he was to be questioned by the RCMP.

He also said he thought Mr. Pearson had been advised by

He called the government's action Thursday incredible and appalling, and said he would not accept the proposed move without a fight.

15 MONTHS' PAY

"In the words of John Paul Jones, I have only just begun to fight," he said.

The bill would give Mr. Jones 15 months' pay dating back to October when he was suspended as chairman of the purchasing commission. He would receive a net $12,057 and qualify for a 10-year civil service pension.

ACQUITTED JAN. 15

Mr. Jones was acquitted Jan. 15 on two charges of receiving favors from a car dealer while a government official.

He has not been reinstated and the crown has appealed the verdict of Judge Montague L. Tyrwhitt-Drake.

D. A. Thompson of Vancouver, counsel for Mr. Jones, launched two court actions this week in the case.

APPEAL ATTACK

He will ask the B.C. appeal court Monday to throw out the crown's appeal in the case.

And on Wednesday, provincial controller-general C. J. Ferber must appear in B.C. Supreme Court to show cause why the government should not be ordered to pay Mr. Jones five months' back salary.

Asian Flu Hits Eastern States

GENEVA (Reuters) — Influenza is spreading in the eastern half of the United States, parts of Russia and in Finland, the World Health Organization reported Friday. The organization said strains of the A-2 virus, commonly known as "Asian flu," have been identified in seven eastern U.S. states.

Author Says:

Old Jail Not Fit For Pigs

QUEBEC (CP) — Montreal author Jacques Hebert, 41, out on bail after three days in Quebec's century-old provincial jail, said conditions are so revolting there that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would protest if pigs were lodged in the institution.

The author was freed on $1,000 cash bail pending his appeal on a conviction for contempt of court.

Mr. Hebert was fined $3,000 Tuesday and sent to jail for 30 days as a result of passages in his book, I Accuse the Assassins of Cofin.

Massive New Evidence Of Aggression Cited

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. state department today made public massive new evidence of outside Communist support and direction of the guerrilla war in South Viet Nam. It termed it "aggression as real as that of an invading army."

The 71-page "white paper," which sought to justify U.S. bombings in North Viet Nam, said the Communist infiltration into South Viet Nam has increased to a new high and that Communist guerrillas there are relying more and more on weapons provided by Communist countries.

The report said that the Viet Nam conflict is no longer an "indigenous guerrilla" war, but has become "a totally new brand of aggression."

It said U.S. policy before the recent bombings in the North had been based on the hope "that the danger could be met within South Viet Nam itself."

It added, however, that "clearly the restraint of the past was not providing adequately for the defense of South Viet Nam against Hanoi's open aggression."

Without specifying what kind, it said the United States in South Viet Nam "will continue necessary measures of defense against the Communist armed aggression coming from North Viet Nam."

Viet Cong guerrillas, who once relied largely on locally-sourced arms, now are receiving "large and increasing quantities" of military supplies from North Viet Nam, much of it originally coming from Communist China and other Communist countries, the report said.

An increasing number of weapons from outside Communist sources have been seized in South Viet Nam. Many of the new weapons cannot be used with captured ammunition and depend on outside supply.

One captured Viet Cong soldier reported that his entire company had been supplied with modern Chinese weapons. More recent "dramatic proof" was the capture on the South Vietnamese coast of a cargo ship carrying thousands of weapons and more than a million rounds of ammunition.

Bonn Ends Aid To Tanzania

BOON (Reuters) — West Germany Friday cut off all military aid to Tanzania in retaliation for the Dar es Salaam government's agreement to the establishment of an East German consulate general there.

Propane Truck Blows Up

AYLMER, Ont. (CP) — At least a third of this southwestern Ontario town's business section was wiped out Friday when a tanker truck laden with propane gas exploded in a main intersection.

The blaze roared out of control for close to three hours, wiping out about 15 businesses.

Early estimates assessed damage at $1,000,000.

The tank truck, driven by Elmer Humphries, was having difficulty gaining traction after stopping at the intersection.

A service truck driven by Al Parker gave it a nudge to get it started.

At this point, a valve on the back of the propane truck broke and propane gas gushed out, filling the area with fumes, followed by a major explosion and a succession of smaller ones.

Parker was treated for hand burns, but his condition was not serious.

Muhammad

'Enemies

Want

My Life'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Black Muslim leader Elijah Muhammad, speaking behind a solid phalanx of karate-trained bodyguards told his followers Friday that his enemies are "out to kill me."

He exhorted the Muslims to "protect yourselves."

Muhammad castigated Black Nationalist leader Malcolm X, a defector from the Muslim hierarchy who was slain in New York last Sunday, as an enemy who "criticized, criticized, criticized... and got what he preached."

The 67-year-old, self-styled "messenger of Allah" speaking at the first session of a three-day convention, vowed that he would not let anybody "destroy" the black supremacy sect.

"If the police can't put a stop to it, we can put a stop to it," he told the cheering faithful.

The only trouble came when Muslim minister Louis X of Boston shouted "we have a traitor in our midst" and pointed to Ben Holman, a Negro reporter for the Columbia Broadcasting System who once posed as a Muslim while working for the Chicago Daily News. Holman was hustled out of the building.

Muslim Held In Murder

NEW YORK (AP)—The first direct police link-up of the Black Muslims to the assassination of Malcolm X came Friday, with the arrest of a husky Negro member of the militant anti-white sect. Held without bail on a homicide charge, he was the second man accused in the slaying.

Since Malcolm, 39, was shot down Sunday, police have worked on the theory that his hater, IML, broke with Elijah Muhammad's Chicago-based Black Muslims lay behind the slaying. Muhammad has denied any complicity.

Early Friday police arrested Norman 3X Butler, 22, a reported member of Muhammad's elite guard of discipline enforcers.

Norman 3X was charged with "acting in concert" in Malcolm's slaying with Talmadge Hayer, 22.

Corporate Influence

By RON POULTON
(Third in a series)

If you want to find the real Canadian titans of finance, pick the daisies in the corporate field by studying some of the 15,500-000 books in Canada's libraries and the directorships of a few dozen companies.

Then, struggle to the top of a pyramid of government statistics which disclose that since 1951 the number of privately-owned companies, partnerships and co-ops has been steadily dropping while the number of incorporated companies has been steadily increasing.

Incorporated companies employ more than 95 per cent of the workers in rubber, paper, primary metals, transportation, electrical equipment, tobacco products, machinery, chemicals, petroleum and coal products, textiles and knitting mills, and metal fabricating.

With 92.9 per cent of the labor force in manufacturing, few Canadians stray far from the corporate influence even if they never know who owns what.

The view from the pyramid is too hazy to spot the Titans of Finance in order of riches.

Private companies, like the mercantile empire presided over by 55-year-old John David Easton, do not, for instance, have to issue financial statements publicly. And while it is known that the T. Eaton Co. is the largest single employer next to the CNR and the government itself, the rest is speculation.

Foreign investment — three-quarters of it American money and tripled since the Second World War — also contributes to the haze. American money probably controls more than 5,000 so-called Canadian businesses.

The haze thickens even more because government regulations are deliberately designed to keep vital information between the titan and the tax man, and away from the impulsive public.
